Ford Chiefs Fought Unions, Aide Tells NLRB

Charging 'Brutality,' Examiner Urges Rehiring of Two After Dallas Hearing

The Labor Front

NEW BATTLE over Wagner Act amendments breaks out as House Rules Committee sends Labor Committee report to floor with provision that drastic Smith committee amendments may be substituted. Page 2.

Firm Upbraided

Responsibility for "brutality," "physical violence" and "terrorism" in discouraging union activity was laid at the door of "senior officials" of the Ford Motor Co. yesterday in a trial examiner's report to the National Labor Relations Board.

Assailing the Company's labor policies in vigorous terms, Trial Examiner Robert N. Denham based his report on hearings in Dallas on charges filed against Ford by the United Automobile Workers and other A. F. L. unions.

Denham recommended that two former employes be reinstated with back pay and that the company be ordered to notify all its 100,000 employes, individually "that it will cease its coercive and intimidating practices."

Case Called Unparalleled

The trial examiner declared in his 86-page report that he knew of "no case in the history of the board . . . in which an employer has deliberately planned and carried into execution a program of brutal beatings, whippings and other manifestations of physical violence comparable to that shown by the uncontradicted and wholly credible evidence" in this case.

Denham asserted that blackjacks, loaded hose, cat o' nine tails made of rubber stripping and electric light wire were among the weapons used by the Ford Motor Co.'s strong arm squad.

"There was no limit of brutality to which this squad and those who were directing it were unwilling to go if necessary, for at one stage even murder was planned," charged the trial examiner.

Says Case Wasn't Local

Denham's recommendations, which include a general proposal that the Ford company "cease from discouraging the organizational activities of its employes at all the plants in the Ford system," now go to the three members of the NLRB for their decision.

In addition to describing Ford's alleged antiunion practices in Dallas, Denham charged that "this case . . . involves circumstances that reach far beyond local conditions."

The labor policies of the Ford Motor Co. are "admittedly" planned in "the main office in Dearborn," he said, "and it is uncontroverted that senior officials of the Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn knew of, helped plan and subsequently approved the program of terrorism that was carried out in Dallas."

Out of the Dead Past—

Modern Enoch Arden Appears After 60 Years, Gets Fortune

By International News Service

New York, April 19.—An old man with blue-veined hands and watery eyes looked searchingly into a woman's face today and slowly nodded his head.

"That's her all right—that's my wife!" he said.

J. F. MUNHALL,
Returns After 60 Years

Tight-lipped, composed, Mrs. Susan J. Mulhall looked straight ahead, unseeing. For almost 60 years she had believed the husband she divorced in 1881 was dead.

John F. Mulhall, 89, not only was alive but refused at first to believe that his wife ever had divorced him.

"That so?" he queried wonderingly. "I always thought it was a separation—I never heard from her about it."

The unusual scene was set in the office of Surrogate James A. Foley, where the disposition of the estate of Mrs. Isabell Mulhall McHie was in question.

Mrs. McHie left a gross estate of approximately $250,000, the major part of it to the Seeing Eye, Inc., which trains guide dogs for the blind at Morristown, N. J.

Under ordinary circumstances, a considerable portion of the estate would have gone to Mrs. Mulhall, her mother, but Mulhall, unheard from in 60 years, put in his appearance. Surrogate Foley ruled that Mulhall was entitled to half.

Mrs. Mulhall gave her local address as Park avenue and said she had lived at the Burlington Hotel in Washington, D. C., until her daughter's death a year ago. Mulhall said he had been living in San Antonio, Tex. He brought along his sister, Mrs. Mary Haskell, of Denver, Colo., to aid in establishing his identity.

MRS. MUNHALL,
As She Greeted Husband

They proved to the satisfaction of the court that Mulhall was the John Mulhall who married Susan on May 11, 1874, in St. Louis, and that a daughter Isabel, was born to them on April 20, 1875.

Mulhall identified photographs of his daughter taken at Sacred Heart Convent at St. Charles, Mo., and produced receipted bills showing he paid her tuition there.

Mrs. Mulhall made it evident that she was not pleased by his unexpected return, refusing to pose with him after the hearing.

Mulhall just blinked his eyes, stroked his chin and wandered off with his sister—and his prospects of collecting better than $100,000.

Train Wreck Kills Ten, Injures 50

Engine of Limited From New York to Chicago Explodes; Debris Blocks Road

By the Associated Press

Little Falls, N. Y., April 19.—At least ten persons died tonight when the Lake Shore Limited, New York-to-Chicago Express train, jumped the track a half mile east of here.

Nine of the 15 cars the train carried left the tracks and piled against an embankment, carrying dowr communicaiton lines and blocking the main Upstate New York East-West motor highway.

John Crowley, editor of the Little Falls Times who lives a few hundred yards from the scene, counted seven bodies in a preliminary checkup and said three other persons were reported dead in one of the pullman cars.

Engineer Pinned in Cab

Crowley said the train's engineer, tentatively identified as J. Earl, Syracuse, was pinned in his cab but still alive. Acetyline torches were being used to free him.

Scores of State troopers, physicians and ambulances rushed to the scene and the Little Falls hospital was taxed to capacity.

Fifty injured persons were crowded into the Little Folk Hospital. The number of injured treated elsewhere could not be determined immediately.

Because wreckage covered the tracks, it was almost impossible to reach the scene by automobile and the injured had to be carried several hundred yards before reaching transportation.

The train, which left Albany 15 minutes late, left the tracks on a wide curve just east of this village in Central New York. As the engine crashed against a high embankment it exploded, sending showers of debris along the roadway and highway.

The limited was composed of 13 Pullman cars, one coach and the engine. Its fireman and baggageman were known dead, their bodies lying along the roadway, although not immediately identified.

Bound from New York

The train, one of the Central's fastest New York-to-Chicago units, left New York City at 6:50 tonight and ran out of Albany on time at 9:43. It was due to stop at Utica at 11:28.

The cause of the accident was not immediately known but witnesses on the scene said debris was strewn for hundreds of yards up the tracks. The train's high-powered engine leaped several yards from the tracks, landing across Route 5, main New York State east-west highway, blocking motor traffic.

A call was sent to Utica, approximately 30 miles away, for ambulances and physicians.

The New York Central dispatcher's office in New York estimated that from 250 to 300 passengers were aboard the wrecked limited.

Allied Army Reported Near Trondheim; All Neutrals Act To Escape Norway's Fate

Yugoslavs Arrest Former Premier; Belgium Interns Thousands of Aliens

War shadows lengthened last night over neutral European nations.

From the North Sea to the Adriatic, nonbelligerent governments acted swiftly to prevent the march into their countries of the German "Fifth Column," which so successfully prepared the invasion of Norway, and of Czecho-Slovakia and Austria earlier.

Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Rumania and Sweden extended surveillance or ordered arrest of suspected aliens.

Holland declared martial law for allthe Netherlands, and a virtual state of siege. The Hague government continued its roundup of suspected saboteurs and foreign agents—a roundup that will be made easier by military rule. All with known Nazi sympathies were suspect.

At the same time, the Netherlands premier, Derek Jan de Geer, broadcast an appeal to his countrymen, at home and abroad, to "resist by armed force" any attempted invasion of Dutch soil.

Belgians Intern Many

Belgium, where German "tourists" are reported to have arrived in large numbers, decided on a roundup of aliens and interned thousands of them. The internments, Premier Pierlot announced, were to "insure against espionage and sabotage in case of war."

Yugoslavia, rumored facing an Italian "protectorate" as well as a Nazi invasion, announced discovery of a plot to turn the government over to Nazis. Homes of hundreds of Germans were raided and many arrested. The former pro-Nazi premier, Stoyadinovic, was put under "protective" arrest.

Hungary called out its air raid protection squads as British and French nationals fled Budapest on rumors of a threatened German invasion. There, too, steps were taken to seize known Nazi sympathizers.

King Carol, harassed by German economic demands, yielded a point to preserve Balkan peace. His Rumanian Parliament granted a German company a lease on 83,000 acres of choice Rumanian forest land, to be worked under German direction by Rumanian labor. He then ended the Parliament session by royal decree.

Sweden on Alert

Sweden maintained her border and coast patrol on a war footing, and guarded aliens within her borders. She also permitted circulation of the newspaper of the left-wing Socialist editor, Guren Nerman, charging Nazi influence in the Swedish navy.

There was no confirmation in Rome of the London reports that Italy had notified the British Ambassador that the Italians had decided to establish a protectorate over the southern Yugoslavian coast. But the report added to the "jitters" throughout the Balkans.

Switzerland continued to increase her army reserves and to shut her borders to "tourists."

White Book Recounts Treason That Opened Door to Nazis

By James B. Reston.

London, April 19.—Hunted by German troops and planes, his capital and all his strategic ports occupied by Nazi soldiers, King Haakon of Norway and his ministers held a brief peace conference with the German Minister, Dr. Curt Brauer, and indicated a willingness to accept sweeping German terms, but the talks broke down when Chancellor Hitler issued new demands.

The story of this peace conference—a conference which might have forced the Allies to land in a hostile instead of a friendly Norway—is told tonight in an official White Book issued by the Norwegian Legation in London.

KING HAAKON

According to this story the Norwegian foreign minister, Halvden Koht, asked Dr. Brauer whether Hitler "could not consider the creation of a friendly government that could collaborate with Germany."

Dr. Brauer replied that Hitler insisted that the new Norwegian government be headed by Maj. Vidkum Quisling, leader of the Nazi group in Norway. Calling a few hours later for King Haakon's reply, Dr. Brauer was told that Norway had refused to accept, and, in reply to the further question as to whether this meant that Norway would resist further invasion, the Norwegians replied "yes, as long as possible."

The Norwegian White Book described in detail how the German invasion had been planned, showing that German ships had arrived at various Norwegian ports during the early hours of April 9, like so many commuters' trains arriving at Grand Central Station in New York on a Monday morning.

It discloses, too, the original German demands on Norway which included not only the capitulation of the Norwegian army and the hoisting of the white flag all over the country, but such details as the handing over of all lightships to the Nazis and the stopping of

British Said to Have Landed 50,000; Nazis Rushing Aid To Port's Garrison

By Otto D. Tolischus

Stockholm, Sweden, April 19. While running troops and artillery to Trondheim to meet an expected Allied and Norwegian offensive against that port, the Germans are rapidly pushing their offensive north of Oslo, where a battle for Elverum began last night.

At the latest report, German troops with howitzers, automatic guns and machine guns were rushing in trucks and buses north from Kongsvinger along the Glommen River and occupied the town of Flisa today. Simultaneously German planes today bombed Rena on the railroad north of Elverum, presumably in an effort to cut communications for any Norwegian retreat.

But, according to reports reaching Sweden, strong Norwegian forces are concentrated at Elverum, the West Point of Norway, determined to stop the German rush. There are some indications that they are reinforced by British officers and possibly even British soldiers, although the Allied forces in that region must be small because of transport difficulties. The outcome of that battle, from which reports are scarce, is still unknown.

Advance in West

Farther west the Germans advanced north of Hoenfoss in the direction of Lake Sperilen.

The movements in the Trondheim region are still unclear. But, according to Swedish press reports, British troops driving south from their landing place at Namsos have fought a first engagement with the Germans, meeting and defeating the "death battalion" which the Germans landed by plane a short distance south of Namsos yesterday.

The Germans are said to have left a number of dead and wounded, while the survivors hastily retreated. The British and Norwegian forces are believed to be in control from Namsos to Steinkjer and are steadily being reinforced.

[The Associated Press reported from Stockholm that British reinforcements were arriving hourly in the 15-mile stretch of Norway's waistline, from Steinkjer, at the head of the Trondheim Fjord, north to Namsos.

[An International New Service cable, also from Stockholm, placed these reinforcements as high as 50,000 and said they included French soldiers.]

At the same time, more reliable information available today contradicts reports that the Germans have penetrated as far south of Trondheim as Roeros. Communications from Stoeren, just south of Trondheim, revealed that the Germans had been checked at that town by a Norwegian force and were last reported at Heimdall, only 6 miles south of Trondheim. The whole territory between Heimdall and Elverum is therefore still in Norwegian hands.

Naval Battle Rumored

Lively air activity was reported from the Trondheim region, and the Norwegians report that German ships have landed troops, artillery and trucks at Trondheim.

Driving northward from Kristiansand the Germans have advanced to Evje and have occupied Egersund south of Stavanger without opposition. They have likewise blown up the radio station at Natodden.

What is believed to have been a new naval battle in the Skagerrak is reported from Gothenburg. No details are available so far, but in-

Barkley Leads For Chairman Of Convention

Bankhead, Byrnes Favored for Making Keynote Address

By Robert C. Albright

Selection of Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley as permanent chairman of the Democratic convention last night was reported virtually agreed on, while the choice for keynoter apparently lay between two other party stalwarts.

Speaker William B. Bankhead and Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, were variously reported on the inside track for the important keynoter place, held at the past two Democratic conventions by Barkley.

Postmaster General James A. Farley put out a feeler on the Barkley-Bankhead combination in New York yesterday, at the same time disclosing his intention of retaining the Democratic National Committee chairmanship up to the convention.

Byrnes Considered

Farley said he thought the Senate majority leader and the Speaker would be good choices for the two posts. In quarters believed closely in touch with the White House it was learned that Senator Byrnes also is being seriously considered for temporary chairman.

Farley had a long luncheon conference with the President Tuesday about convention offices and "other matters." The Senate majority leader had a luncheon conference at the White House Thursday, apparently on the same subjects. Neither Farley nor Barkley disclosed what was discussed.

While general agreement appeared to have been reached on Barkley in the permanent chairman's role, it is believed no final decision has been

Court Rulings Peril Liberty, Editors Warn

Post-Dispatch Official, Convicted of Contempt, Asks Legal Reforms

By Hedley Donovan

The American Society of Newspaper Editors last night warned that recent judicial rulings may expose to imprisonment any citizen who ventures comment on a court decision.

Five minutes after hearing a play-by-play account of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch's legal battle with a Missouri Circuit Court, the editors unanimously adopted a resolution urging:

"The utmost vigilance against a recently exhibited tendency of some judges to extend the conception of contempt of court into an unwarranted assault on the Bill of Rights—an assault which, if persisted in, will soon expose any citizen to arrest and imprisonment who ventures publicly to criticize, or even comment upon, current judicial decisions, however debatable they may be."

Coghlan Urges Legal Reform

Ralph Coghlan, chief of the Post-Dispatch editorial page, challenged lawyers to "cease being ritualistic medicine men" and to devote their energies to judicial reform so far-reaching that press criticism of the courts would no longer be necessary.

The St. Louis editor is free under $500 bail while appealing a 20-day jail sentence for criticism of a Missouri judge.

An oratorical free-for-all closed the society's two-day convention here, as two New Dealers and two Republicans argued "The Third Term and Other 1940 Issues" at a banquet in the Willard Hotel.

2 British Troopships Hit by Bombers, Berlin Announces

By Louis P. Lochner

Berlin, April 19.—Germany is paying her way in part for her wide-flung war activities on the Siegfried Line, in Poland, Denmark and Norway, but is pulling her belt tight and drawing ruthlessly on her reserves, Walther Funk disclosed today.

Funk, minister of economics and president of the Reichsbank, gave an insight into the country's economic picture on a day when the nation marked among other chief developments in the war:

Latest German advices from Scandinavia said German troops pushing up the Glomen River 20 miles inside Norway from the Swedish border drove today to the vicinity of Elverum, and that one-time refuge of King Haakon VII and his government was expected to fall at any moment.

German bombers tonight attacked British transports off the west coast of Norway, an official announcement said, and struck two and a cruiser with heavy bombs. Whether the ships sank was not reported.

The German high command, reviewing yesterday's operations, said German fliers sank a submarine and hit other vessels in a surprise raid as the British began landing troops in the Far North; three other submarines were reported sunk in the Skagerrak and Kattegat as well as a Nor-

Official Gives Figure As Churchill Vows To Drive Invaders Out

By Drew Middleton

London, April 19. — Winston Churchill today pledged the Allied armies to an offensive which will "cleanse the soil of the Vikings . . . from the filthy pollution of Nazi tyranny," in a rousing, confident speech to seamen from the destroyers Hardy and Eclipse.

While British troops, side by side with Norwegians, struck southward toward Trondheim and Germany's most vital Norwegian base, London shook itself out of a day of doubt to give a thunderous welcome to the returning sailors.

Churchill assured them: "Your countrymen are well content with the manner in which you have discharged your duty."

But though Churchill spoke with assurance, there was less comfort for Britons in word brought from the northern front by a Norwegian official.

Germany, he declared, is pouring 2,000 men a day into Norway by plane—and neutral military attaches, who as early as last Sunday placed Nazi dispositions in that country at 60,000, now believe the German forces to be nearing 85,000.

They stressed the ease with which the Reich can ferry troops to Norway by seaplane from Denmark, and thus emphasized the need for speed in the combined British-Norwegian advance on Trondheim.

D. C. Heads Favor Food Stamps And 5-Cent Relief Milk

By Charles A. Stofberg

Five-cent milk for Washington needy families and a proposed food stamp plan were approved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Both projects, recommended by Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy, still must be approved by Department of Agriculture agencies. The distribution of the milk would get under way by July 1.

The reason for seeking approval of the Commissioners at this time, Bondy declared, is to get their backing for appropriation of $33,520 to set up departments to handle the projects. The Commissioners indicated they would seek Congressional authority to use $33,520 of the relief appropriation contained in the 1941 budget, which is now before the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations.

In a report to the Commissioners yesterday, Bondy proposed to set up ten relief milk stations where eligible persons on relief would buy the milk at five cents a quart, which would be paid the producer.

The handlers or the local distributing dairies holding contracts with the Department of Agriculture under a competitive bidding system, would process, bottle, deliver to the relief milk stations and handle at the stations the milk so purchased, Bondy said. The handlers would sell the milk.

Under the food stamp program, which was reported to have proved successful in many cities, the Board of Public Welfare would purchase orange and blue stamps from the Agriculture Department and would

Old Tom, at Zoo 50 Years, Is as Cocky, Too, as Ever

Old Tom, who slew his wife, yesterday marked his fiftieth anniversary behind bars, as haughty and defiant a bird as ever.

Old Tom, a sulphur cockatoo than whom no other bird, or other mammal has remained longer in captivity, amuses himself by trying to nip the hand that feeds him.

It was on April 19, 1890, that a Chevy Chase woman and her two grandsons alighted from a carriage at the Smithsonian Institution and deposited a pair of cockatoos, one named Darby and the other Joan.

Ever since he broke the American zoo record for longevity in captivity about a decade or so ago, Darby has been known as Old Tom.

Joan departed long since. One day, not long after they switched addresses from Chevy Chase to Rock Creek Park, the arrogant male went berserk and killed his mate. He has been "in solitary" ever since, in a corner of the birdhouse.

Life Begins At 50

"He has my congratulations on his golden anniversary," said Judge Henry Hunt, of Rockville, the one and same Henry who, as a tot of 4, presented the cockatoo to Uncle Sam a half century ago.

A few animals in the park, notably the Galapagos tortoise, are older than Old Tom, but zoo officials are certain that no other collection in this country—and probably in the entire world—has a specimen whose record can match this bird's.

Strengthen Defenses of U. S., D. A. R. Urges as Sessions End

By Lucia Giddens

Strengthening of the armed forces and fortifications of the United States was advocated by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the closing session of its forty-ninth congress yesterday.

A resolution declared that "events in the world today" made stronger national defense imperative for "peace in the Western Hemisphere."

In other actions taken at the final session, the D. A. R. disapproved the establishment of a Federal department of education and approved legislation requiring "registration of certain international organizations carrying on propaganda and activities in the United States."

Another resolution reaffirmed the D. A. R.'s support of "the restricted immigration and national quotas policies of the United States."

After the installation of national and State officers, the congress adjourned, but delegates lingered to attend two major social functions—Mrs. Roosevelt's reception for them at the White House yesterday afternoon and the annual banquet last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

Closing with traditional pageantry, the Congress watched the flower-laden procession of officers to the stage, as the U. S. Navy Band Orchestra played a march. New State regents took the oath of office and received the ribbons emblematic of their position. Vice regents also were installed.

The eight new vice presidents general, elected Thursday, took

House Group Reports Out Smith Bill

Rules Committee Approves It Along With Norton Measure

The battle over proposed alterations to the Wagner Act broke out anew yesterday as the House Rules Committee, in an action described as "unprecedented," permitted the drastic Smith amendments to reach the floor.

By a vote reported to be 9 to 1, the Rules Committee gave right of way to the A. F. L.-approved Norton bill, with a proviso that the Smith bill, attacked by the A. F. L. and C. I. O. alike, may be substituted for it. The rule would permit amendments to either measure.

The Rules Committee's move came as a surprise climax to the weeks of behind-the-scenes struggle to bring proposed amendments to the Wagner Act out to the floor of the House.

Although the way has now been cleared for a general free-for-all on the Wagner Act, the actual date of the House battle was still in doubt.

The Norton bill, containing the A. F. L.-sponsored amendment protecting craft unions, had been approved by the Labor Committee with instructions to its chairman, Representative Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, to try to employ parliamentary methods that would prevent any other amendments at all.

Action Denounced

But by reporting a rule bringing out the Smith bill as well as the Norton bill, the Rules Committee circumvented the Labor Committee's wishes and thereby provoked a fight between the two groups.

The action of the Rules Committee, which Mrs. Norton characterized as "underhanded" and "amazing," was taken at the close of a meeting devoted to other matters.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, a member of the committee as well as chairman of the special Smith committee investigating the Labor Board, urged adoption of the rule permitting both Mrs. Norton's and his proposals to reach the floor.

Supported by other Southern Democrats on the Rules Committee, Smith prevailed despite the efforts of Chairman Sabath—the only 100 per cent New Dealer on the committee—to postpone action. Sabath was the sole member, of the 10 who were present, to record his opposition to the rule.

"Insult," Says Mrs. Norton

Sabath declared that his committee had "violated all precedents" because it had reported out a rule without waiting for a request from Mrs. Norton, chairman of the standing committee to which both Norton and Smith bills had been referred.

"It's a direct insult to the Labor Committee," snapped Mrs. Norton when she heard of the rule. "It was done in an underhanded way, but no one should have been surprised in the least."

The Smith amendments provide for a new labor board and sweeping revision of present board procedure.

Ford Co. Accused As Anti-Union

Denham stated that "the effects of the unfair labor practices depicted in this report, which have emanated from the senior executive officers of the Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn, inevitably extend to all the employes of the company wheresoever situated."

"The recurrence of such outrageous and violent acts can only be prevented," he declared, "by treating the problem not in piecemeal but as one which applies to the entire system."

Denham charged that in "mobilizing every available force to accomplish the defeat of labor," the Ford Co. in 1937 used "the fear element."

It carried out its plan, he said, "by gathering together the most brutal thugs in its employ, who could be counted upon to accept an opportunity to indulge their sadistic desires in lieu of additional compensation, and setting this gang, who took a money consideration equalling only their regular production pay . . . upon any person pointed out to them as a C. I. O. organizer, member, advocate or sympathizer." (At that time, the union was a C. I. O. affiliate.)

The other method used by Ford in discouraging union activity, the report said, was "sowing seeds of distrust of the unions" through such means as distribution what he called the "scurrilous" pamphlet, "Ford Gives Viewpoint on Labor."

Denham stated that the record showed that "company officials protected members of the (strong-arm) squad from imprisonment and supplied them with funds when they were forced into hiding." He quoted one witness as saying that from June to November, 1937, "there were from 30 to 50 occasions when persons were assaulted on the streets of Dallas, or were taken into the outskirts of the city, where they were beaten, flogged or tarred and feathered."

Denham said the company rested on the legal proposition that none of the acts described by witnesses were authorized by the company and therefore the company could not be charged with responsibility for such acts or their consequences.

Denham's report at one point recited the testimony of S. C. (Fats) Perry, in which he described how men suspected of union inclinations were taken "for a ride."

Testimony Quoted

The examiner quoted Perry's testimony as follows:

"Well, the first thing we would do, we would search them and find out if they had any identification belonging to a union of any kind, or where they were from, or what they belonged to, and gave them a good talk, and worked over some of them, ones that we had under suspicion of being a union man, or if they had cards on them."

Q. "What do you mean 'Gave them a working over?'"

A. "We would whip them, beat them up."

Q. "With what?"

A. "Put the fear of God in them, as they put it."

Q. "What would you whip them with?"

A. "Some with fists, some with blackjacks."

Q. "Anything else?"

A. "One or two of them we whipped with a regular whip we had made out of rubber with cord and some of them—one of them was whipped, according to whether we thought he could take it or not, with brushes off of trees, limbs."

Counsel Plans Exception

Dallas, April 19 (AP).—Gabe P. Allen said tonight a Labor Board accusation that the Ford Motor Co. had employed "thugs" was "just a conclusion and wild inference" in an effort to carry out the board's policy of "persecuting" the company. The attorney for the motor concern during the hearing which resulted in today's report said he and coattorney Neth L. Leachman would file exceptions.

Planes Will Go 750 M. P. H., Towers Predicts to Senators

Underwood & Underwood

Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics, appears to be looking for an answer to give the Senate Naval Affairs Committee

By John G. Norris

Warplanes of the future traveling as fast as light—750 miles an hour—were predicted yesterday by Rear Admiral John T. Towers, chief of Naval Aeronautics Bureau.

"We are afraid there is a limit to speed," Towers told the Senate Naval Affairs Committee. "At the rate plane speeds have been mounting recently, you might think we'd soon be going 1,000 miles an hour. But when speed approaches the velocity of sound, we appear to be stopped at the present outlook."

The naval air chief appeared in support of legislation to authorize 22 new warships and 1,000 additional planes for the fleet. The committee finished hearing naval witnesses and prepared to wind up next week after listening to peace organizations and other opponents of the bill.

Plane Capacity Boosted

Foreign plane orders since the war began, Towers stated, have boosted the monthly production capacity of the United States about 1,000 planes a month from an annual limit of about 4,000 last September.

About 3,000 foreign aircraft have been delivered since the outbreak of war and about 4,000 more are on order he said. The figures do not include the $1,000,000,000 plane order now being placed by the Anglo-French purchasing mission.

Defending the Administration's new policy of selling latest American warplanes to the Allies, Towers said their purchases have resulted in quicker deliveries and cheaper prices for the Navy. A total of $557,000 was saved on one contract alone he stated, because foreign sales helped finance a manufacturer's plant expansion.

Arnold Said Prices Were Up

Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, recently told Congress the price of Army planes was mounting, but said foreign orders had nothing to do with it.

Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, naval shipbuilding coordinator asked the committee to amend the 11 per cent expansion bill to permit the Navy to contract immediately for the 63 war vessels carried therein and already authorized.

By placing orders for the two-year $1,177,000,000 program at once, he said, completion of the ships would be advanced many months, and savings would result for larger quantity production.

Under the amendment proposed, ships scheduled to be laid down in the second year of the program would not be started until Congress votes initial funds, but plans could be prepared and materials gathered ahead of time. Each contract would be revocable if Congress refuses funds for the ships.

Barkley Ahead for Convention Chair

Bankhead Eloquence Stressed

Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama, comanager of Speaker Bankhead's Presidential campaign, asserted Bankhead's choice as keynoter would not interfere in any way with plans to place his name before the convention as a Presidential candidate. While it has not been customary for candidates to accept convention office, Hill pointed out there was no rule against it and urged the "excellence" of Bankhead's oratorical talents in support of his keynote choice.

Supporters of Senator Byrnes' qualifications pointed out that on numerous occasions two Democratic Senators have filled both high convention posts, as permanent chairman and keynoter. Byrnes has been regarded as the President's "trouble shooter" at the Capitol on important legislation, and recently has figured in Democratic Vice Presidential speculation.

Interest in third term and "White House heir" speculation was heightened meanwhile by the President's Jefferson Day opportunity tonight to declare his political intentions. Mr. Roosevelt will address the Young Democratic clubs of America at 10:45 from Warm Springs, Ga.

The impression had become widespread that the President would not disclose his personal plans until the eve of during the Democratic convention, but he was expected to do nothing meanwhile to slow down the "draft" drive to assure him of convention domination.

Equal interest attached to the speech tonight of Attorney General Jackson at the principal Jefferson Day dinner in Washington. Jackson has been widely regarded as the man Mr. Roosevelt would prefer to turn over his White House reins to, should he not run himself and should he be able to swing the convention that far to the left.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, whose name has been linked by New Dealers with Jackson's on a possible combination ticket, meanwhile reiterated that he was not a candidate for anything.

Hull's statement came in reply to queries on Thursday's plug for him by Gov. Clyde R. Hoey of North Carolina. Hoey urged the North Carolina delegation to vote for Hull instead of himself.

Hull said he had asked his friends and other interested parties not to say anything or do anything contrary to the position he has taken, of having no political aspirations.

Other developments:

New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey formally entered Maryland's May 6 primaries. His certificate was filed at Annapolis by John E. Ackerman, of Dewey's New York headquarters. It appeared Dewey would win Maryland's 16 delegates by default, as the deadline for filing is today, and both Senator Taft, of Ohio, and Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, have announced they will not contest.

Inquiry Ordered

The Senate Campaign Investigating Committee ordered an investigation of complaints that "excessive sums of money" have been spent in behalf of the Presidential campaigns of some candidates. Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, said complaints came "from apparently reliable sources." Gillette declined to name candidates or the party affected, but said the charges thus far involved only one party.

Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher and 1936 Republican Vice Presidential nominee, lunched at the Capitol with Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary, of Oregon. McNary, himself a dark horse G. O. P. Presidential possibility, said their talk concerned not candidates, but party platform. McNary has always been interested in a progressive party platform.

Senator Gillette said he could not disclose names of Presidential candidates involved in excessive spending complaints "because that would place an individual in an unfavorable light even before we made an investigation."

Resolution Adopted

Gillette's campaign investigating committee adopted a resolution calling for assignment of investigators to look into complaints of excessive spending by residential candidates, Vice Presidential candidates, convention delegates and candidates for the Senate in all parties.

Gillette said there now was no Federal limit on campaign spending, but the committee would decide after studying complaints whether to seek prosecution, recommend new legislation or merely make public findings.

His Senate committee also voted to investigate Missouri complaints "of the improper use of official influence and the promise or withholding of State patronage not only in the selection of delegates to a national convention but in the State Senatorial campaign."

Gillette said he had received complaints that the National Association of Manufacturers was circularizing its membership for funds in connection with Congressional races. An association spokesman in New York later said the N. A. M. never solicited funds in any political campaigns.

'Easy-Money' Policy Fought By U. S. Group

Advisory Council Tells Reserve Board of Peril To Private Enterprise

By Felix Cotten.

The Federal Advisory Council warned the Federal Reserve Board last June that the Administration's extreme "easy money" policy "threatens the existence of private banking and with it the whole system of private enterprise."

This is disclosed in the annual report of the Reserve Board for 1939, made public yesterday.

The council, set up by law to advise the Reserve Board on matters pertaining to the operation of the Reserve System, warned against the prevailing easy money policy at each of its four meetings with the board during the year.

Modification Urged

It asked last June for a modification of this policy. In November it recommended that the Federal Reserve open market committee sell a substantial amount of the Reserve Banks' holdings of Government bonds as a mean of tightening up to some extent on the exceptionally low interest rates paid by the Government for money.

These recommendations have not been followed.

As a result of heavy imports of gold, excess reserves or idle funds of Federal Reserve member banks now exceed $6,000,000,000. This unprecedented volume of idle money has weighed down interest rates on Government and other high-grade securities to the lowest levels in history.

Policy Begun in 1938

The Administration launched the present exceptionally easy money policy in February, 1938, when a new spending program was started to end the 1937 recession. The policy, then in effect, of "sterilizing" gold, was abandoned. Reserve requirements imposed on Federal Reserve member banks were reduced to some extent. Excess reserves soared rapidly, and have continued to increase.

The easy money policy has been followed, with certain variations, since the 1929 crash on the theory that it would stimulate recovery by inducing business to borrow and banks to lend.

"It has done neither," the Federal Advisory Council declared at its meeting last June 6. "But it has done and is doing undeniable economic injury to the whole savings class of the American people."

Tendency Feared

Its tendency, the council said, is to weaken capital structure of banks, and to encourage an unhealthy position of the bond portfolios of the banking system. By lowering the cost of Government deficit financing, the group argued, it has made the people and Congress indifferent to the steadily mounting public debt and "is tending to create illusions" as to the eventual burden of carrying an increasing debt.

The effect, the council said, is to constantly reduce the returns on endowments of schools, colleges, churches, hospitals and other institutions, with a lessening of the services which they can perform.

U. S. Fleet Ready To Go Wherever Sent, Edison Says

San Francisco, April 19 (U.P.).—The United States fleet is "prepared to go anywhere national policy may send us," Secretary Edison said today when asked specifically if that included the Dutch East Indies.

"The Navy does not create national policy, it goes anywhere it is instructed to go," said Edison. He added that he was "enthused" over the fleet maneuvers in Hawaii.

He said the present fleet needs improvements and that he would ask Congress for more oil and ammunition appropriations to extend the scope of maneuvers.

Printing Union Opposes Bill To Tax Chains

Store Systems Made Advertising's Growth Possible, Leader Says

By the Associated Press

A printing trades union opposed the Patman chain store tax bill yesterday "in defense of the jobs of our members and the economic welfare of the plants employing them."

The attitude of the union, International Allied Printing Trades Association (A. F. L.), was expressed to the House Ways and Means Subcommittee by John H. Haggerty, chairman of the board of governors. The subcommittee later adjourned hearings until Monday.

Haggerty said many of the international's members would lose their jobs if chain stores, which gave them business he estimated at $350,000,000 a year, were taxed out of business by the Patman bill. In 1937, he said, the chains' business meant jobs for 34,000 members of the union.

For other members, Haggerty continued, living costs would be increased 10 per cent.

"We oppose the planned death or breakup of important parts of the retail industry not only because of the direct effect this would have upon printing purchases of the companies affected, but also because of the larger disruption of the entire Nation-wide system of retailing which has made possible the great growth of national advertising," he said.

Nation-wide chains, he said "have not displaced, they have supplemented and expanded the work of individual retailers."

Matthew R. Speedie, of La Fayette, Ind., opposed the bill in behalf of the Retail Clerks International Protective Association, of which he is vice president.

Treasury Seeks Law on Wealth Of Danes, Norse

Pending Legislation, Transfers Are Banned Without Licenses

The Treasury intends to ask Congress for specific legislation authorizing power to prohibit transactions without a license in stocks and bonds on behalf of Danes and Norwegians, it was announced yesterday.

A conference with a view to drafting the necessary legislation will be held with Congressional leaders Monday, officials said.

Meanwhile, Secretary Morgenthau yesterday, pending enactment of the legislation, issued an order prohibiting transfers of securities for Danish and Norwegian nationals without a license.

The object of the move, it was explained, is to close up a potential "loophole" in President Roosevelt's recent executive order prohibiting withdrawal from this country of Danish and Norwegian money and property without a license. The purpose of the order was to prevent the Nazi invaders from claiming wealth of these countries located in the United States.

Interpretation Received

The question has arisen as to whether the order, issued under the 1917 Trading with the Enemy Act as amended by the 1933 Banking Act, covered transfers of stocks and bonds on behalf of Danes and Norwegians.

Undersecretary Bell said the Guaranty Trust Co., New York, had received an interpretation from a law firm to the effect that the order did not apply to such transactions.

To counteract this, the Treasury made two moves. Morgenthau sent a telegram to George L. Harrison, president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, telling him the Treasury did not agree with this opinion, and that all such transactions would be subject to license. This ruling was submitted to Attorney General Jackson and approved by him.

Expected to Be Rushed

But to be doubly sure, Bell explained, arrangements were made to seek legislation, which will be in the form of an amendment to the Trading with the Enemy Act. Expectation is that a joint resolution would be rushed through Congress as rapidly as possible.

Edward H. Foley, jr., Treasury general counsel, pointed out that, if transfers of securities were permitted without license, the securities could be taken out of the country. This would mean export of Danish and Norwegian wealth without the Treasury control which the President's order contemplates, he explained.

Thus far, Morgenthau said, 1,132 applications for transfers of funds have been approved out of a total of 1,200 filed.

in turn permit each relief family to purchase $1 in orange stamps for each person in the family per week. With each dollar's worth of orange stamps the board would provide free 50 cents in blue stamps. The family then could go to local stores and purchase any commodity at regular retail prices with orange stamps and with the blue stamps purchase commodities listed as surplus by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, and carried as regular stock in the store.

11,500 Eligible for Milk

The retailer then is reimbursed by clearing his stamps through banks to the Treasury. The Public Welfare Department with money received from the relief clients at the time the orange stamps are purchased renews its revolving fund for the purchase of additional stamps from the F. S. C. C.

To set up this revolving fund, the Commissioners will seek Congressional authority to use $150,000 of the relief appropriation.

The welfare director estimated some 11,500 persons or families would be eligible for the relief of milk.

Bondy said he had discussed setting up the food stamp plan here with Philip F. Maguire, executive vice president of F. S. C. C. Bondy said more than 20,000 persons would be eligible for the stamps.

Dawes Plans a Final Speech, To Stave Off U.S. 'Bankruptcy'

Former Vice President Charles G. Dawes has one last speech on his chest, and he intends to unburden himself of it before the coming annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce, it was learned yesterday.

He will outline to the chamber, which will be in session here from April 29 to May 2, a plan to save the Federal Government from bankruptcy.

Advance notices indicate that the speech will have an old "Hell and Maria" punch. It will feature the chamber's organization dinner on the night of April 30. Arrangements have been made for a 30-minute broadcast over the Mutual Broadcasting System hookup.

"The Next President and the Budget" will be the title of the speech.

Dawes has not made a speech in a long while, his friends say. He will be 75 years old next August. He wants to present his thoughts, and then sign off.

He intends to unfold a new "Dawes plan," much more important to his mind than his famous German reparations plan. He is said to feel this country is faced with a national catastrophe, that the attention of the American public should be direced toward averting it.

He regards the present budget system as extravagant and wasteful, since money is appropriated without regard to revenue.

He believes, it is said, that the Government ought to try to find out how much money it has to spend, and then arrange to spend it in the most useful way. In other words, revenue and expenditures ought to be definitely related.

Advance registration of businessmen who will attend the coming Chamber of Commerce meeting is nearly double what it was at the corresponding time a year ago, it was revealed. This is regarded as due to a growing interest in national and international affairs, and to the fact that 1940 is a Presidential year.

Mead Advises U. S. to Abolish Age Barriers

New Yorker Urges Government to Set Example to Industry

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, yesterday advised eliminating age barriers for Government employment.

Mead, a member of the Senate Civil Service Committee, raised the age question during the committee's hearing on the Ramspeck bill.

Pointing out that some examinations set a maximum age limit of 35, he said "we ought to be extremely liberal in setting an example to private industry by removing this burden to older workers."

"Unfair Prohibition"

"I think it's an unfair prohibition against good, wholesome, patriotic Americans," he continued.

Kenneth Vipond, assistant trial examiner for the Civil Service Commission, said very few examinations fixed 35 as the maximum age, and explained that in dealing with Government agencies the commission constantly sought to raise the age limit.

Arthur S. Fleming, Republican member of the Civil Service Commission, said it was a compliment to the work of the commission that workers who might be brought into civil service by the Ramspeck bill would "not be worth a thin dime to any political party."

Fleming said civil service workers were "worth a hundred cents on the dollar to the American people from the standpoint of service."

Would Include TVA

Senators Mead and George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Commissioner Fleming said they favored including the Tennessee Valley Authority in the proposed merit system extension.

George remarked that a change of administration would bring "chaos" to TVA organization, while Fleming said the Civil Service Commission should have authority as the central personnel agency for the Government. Vipond told the committee that the per capita cost of administering the TVA personnel program was $50, including its training program, while the cost of the commission's program was $4.56.

E. Claude Babcock, of the Federal Personnel Association, urged that in cutting down personnel seniority should be used as a guide instead of efficiency. He told the committee that after the Archives was covered into the civil service last year, two officials, turned down by the commission, had been kept on their jobs.

House Approves Crop Insurance For Cotton

By the Associated Press

The House voted yesterday by an overwhelming majority to extend the Federal crop insurance program to cotton, starting with the 1941 crop. It is now limited to wheat.

Overriding objections that the insurance program still was in an experimental stage, the House substituted its bill for a similar Senate measure. It goes back to the Senate.

As voted, the bill would authorize insurance of cotton farmers against loss of from 50 to 75 per cent of their crop. Premiums and losses would be paid in cotton.

Proponents of the bill said that in the first year of the wheat program's operation, about 70,000,000 bushels were insured. Premiums, paid in wheat, amounted to about 7,000,000 bushels and losses totaled 9,000,000. The number of applications this year, they said, indicated the number of policyholders would be more than doubled.

It was announced, meanwhile, that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's 1938 farm program cost $499,532,875.44, compared with approximately $326,000,000 for 1937.

Administrative expense in Washington was $3,485,371.59.

War to Govern Roosevelt's Stay In Warm Springs

Warm Springs, Ga., April 19 (AP).—President Roosevelt came back tonight to his snug, white-frame cottage on Pine Mountain to rest, keep a weather eye on Europe's war, and make what may be his first purely political speech in months.

He wanted to spend two weeks at the Warm Springs Infantile Paralysis Foundation, but there was no assurance, however, that rapidly changing world affairs might not cause him to return to the Capital earlier.

Throughout the President's stay at Warm Springs the train was to be held at Atlanta under special guard in readiness for a run back to Washington.

Mr. Roosevelt agreed to speak tomorrow night by radio to dinners of Young Democrats clubs over the country. Members of his party said they had no reason to suspect he would clarify the third-term issue.

Woman Gets Back In Home by Calling Fire Department

"Honest to goodness—I'll never do anything like that again as long as I live."

Thus asserted Mrs. R. B. Flynn, 28, of 5402 Third street northwest, after the police, fire rescue squad and an ambulance drove up to her apartment—to let her in.

She had gone to the drug store and when she returned discovered her key was in another pocketbook. She feared, too, that she had left the electric iron plugged in.

"Call the fire department," someone suggested. She did, and the results were amazing.

Sirens blowing, a hook and ladder, a scout car and an ambulance pulled up to the door. A husky firefighter hoisted a ladder, climbed through a second-floor window and opened the door.

P. S.—The iron was not plugged in.

Dr. Groover, Who Gave Career, About to Give Life to Cancer

Worked With X-Ray 20 Years Longer After Learning It Would Mean Death to Continue His Research

Dr. Thomas A. Groover last night lay dying of an affliction which he dedicated a career to treat and cure in others.

GROOVER

"Death is a matter of hours, or possibly days," said Dr. Worth B. Daniels, attending physician, of the 62-year-old Washington radiologist who realized as long as 20 years ago that his life would be taken by cancer if he remained in his X-ray laboratory—yet he did remain.

The stricken scientist, founder of the medical firm of Groover, Christie & Merritt, lies in his apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. It was only four months ago that he ceased active work, forced to do so by the ravages of a malignant disease to which he was determined not to yield until it became physically impossible for him to continue in harness.

He is one of the few remaining pioneers in roentgenology.

It was just 40 years ago that he introduced himself, in the old Emergency Hospital, to the mysteries of X-rays. Scarcely five years earlier their discovery had been reported by Roentgen.

Effects at First Unknown

In those early days the handful of American M. D.'s who had the nerve to tinker with this remarkable phenomenon which enabled them to see what they could only guess at before were not aware of its frightful effect on living tissue.

Seeking to make a picture of a fracture, an X-ray man of 1900 would hold a patient's arm before the machine for many minutes, perhaps as long as an hour. The doctor's hand would be radiated but he thought nothing of it.

What Dr. Groover believed first was eczema—that rash on his fingers—was really a group of destructive lesions produced by X-ray exposure. One by one he had the fingers of his left hand amputated and then, some 20 years ago, he sacrificed the arm.

X-Ray Won't Help Him

At that stage, it is believed, he could have saved himself by quitting the X-ray laboratory. But Dr. Groover elected to continue. The result was that the fingers of his right hand became affected. Gradually the disease spread to vital organs.

A nationally known authority in his field, Dr. Groover is a charter member and a past president of the American Roentgenological Society.

An ironical sidelight on Dr. Groover's illness is that radiation, which he employed to treat successfully hundreds of cancer sufferers, could not be used in his own case. The reason, as explained by an associate, is that his body had already absorbed such a great quantity of the rays over the last four decades that the tissues were no longer responsive to them.

Coster Aide Tells Of Secret Gifts To Both Parties

New York, April 19 (AP).—The late F. Donald Coster-Musica arranged for the McKesson & Robbins drug firm to make secret contributions to both the Republican and Democratic parties, a witness in Federal court said today.

John H. McGloon, a former controller of the concern and one of four defendants on trial on conspiracy and mail fraud charges, told of signing "pink slips" or vouchers, which allegedly covered a number of political contributions.

One such "pink slip," he said, was made out in the name of R. J. Platt, his assistant, supposedly for business trip expenses.

"Coster was interested in making a contribution to the national committee to uphold the Constitution," McGloon explained.

"He made such donations in Platt's name. One time Coster arranged for contributions to both the Republican and Democratic National committees.

"When Platt heard about it, he objected. He said he was Republican and didn't like a contribution in his name to the Democrats. Coster said:

"'Well, it's too late now. I've already done it.'"

McGloon said one contribution was for the campaign of Gov. Cross of Connecticut.

Civilization's Doom Is Near, Philosopher Says

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor.

Philadelphia, April 19.—Reasons to believe that civilization is about to smash up and that leadership for its rebuilding will pass into the hands of races other than those of Western Europe and the United States were described today to the American Philosophical Society.

Dr. Alfred V. Kidder, chairman of the division of historical research, Carnegie Institution, of Washington, traced the maps of migration of world leadership in the past.

"It is seen," he said, "that while there has been a comforting general rise in civilization, its mounting course has been interrupted by drops proportionate in violence to the heights of each preceding peak, and the map shows that once a people has reached a position at the top of the heap it inevitably has fallen, and leadership has been taken over by dwellers in some other land. "All of which would seem to mean that our present order is due for a terrific smash, and that the next advance will be made by races other than those of Western Europe and the United States."

Linden Sentenced As Embezzler

Roland Linder, 28, former travel agency employe, pleaded guilty in District Court yesterday to embezzling $471 from his employer early this year to do some traveling of his own. He was sentenced to serve one to two years.

After his release, Linder will face a charge of entering the United States illegally. He was born in Manchuria, and traveled over most of Europe before coming to this country seven years ago.

Hampden-Sydney, Va., April 19 (AP).—Work began today on the first unit of a new $75,000 gymnasium for Hampden-Sydney College.

The initial unit, costing $58,000, will be completed for the opening of the fall term, in September, according to present plans. A second unit, which will be added later at an estimated cost of $17,000, will include offices for athletic officials, a monogram room and other offices.

WPA Workers Started Fire, Principal Says

Head of Powell Junior Declares Witnesses Saw Trash Ignited

Charges that WPA workers and not students of Powell Junior High School started Wednesday's two-alarm fire in a half-demolished house at 1501 Lamont street northwest, were made yesterday by a dozen witnesses uncovered by Lester T. Walter, principal of the school.

Incensed at accusations by a WPA photographer that Powell pupils, smoking cigarettes, ignited a pile of debris beside the building, Walter launched an independent investigation which, he said, disclosed "gross carelessness" by workmen engaged in wrecking the three-story house.

"From the testimony of those who watched the blaze from the time it started until it was extinguished by firemen, I am convinced my students had nothing to do with it and that those in charge of the project are trying to cover up their own negligence," Walter said.

To Protest to Edwards

Mrs. B. P. Donnelly, president of the Powell Parent-Teachers Association, said her group would protest to Paul Edwards, District WPA administrator, against "unjust indictment" of the students.

Testimony by youngsters and teachers at the Powell School yesterday indicated that the blaze was set by workmen to get rid of the heap of debris and that there was ample opportunity after the fire started to extinguish it before it got beyond control.

Luther Pirtle, 14, said he was in the school lunch room and saw a man pour a liquid on the pile of laths and ignite the heap with a flaming stick. He said the man immediately went away and that no children were near the house.

Also in the lunch room was Tobey Marchitelli, 16, who said his attention was first attracted by two workmen standing beside a "small bonfire." They made no effort to put it out, he said.

"I had seen the workmen burning trash around there before," he said, "and I thought they were just doing it again."

Thinks Oil Was Used

Sid Mickelson, 15, a Boy Scout, who "knows how to build fires," said it appeared that kerosene had been used on the pile "because it got such a quick start." Although several men were standing around the blaze as it started, "no one tried to put it out," said Mickelson.

Several other students testified along the same lines, each reporting they observed no children near the house. Mrs. F. G. Barton, a teacher, saw a "stocky man" standing beside the debris "calmly watching it burn." The same thing was seen by Paul Hahn, another teacher. Neither saw any youngsters nearby.

WPA Administrator Edwards Thursday exhibited several photographs which he said absolved his workmen of blame. The pictures showed the pile of laths and plaster beside the building before and after the fire started and showed several children in each.

Throughout the fire, Walter charged, the Powell School was in danger. He showed a pencil sharpener from one of the rooms which had been melted by the intense heat.

"If any of my children were going to start a fire, they certainly wouldn't do it right in front of the principal's office window," he declared.

Officials Approve Million-Dollar D. C. Courthouse

Occupancy of the new million-dollar Municipal Courthouse by June 15 was predicted yesterday, following final inspection and approval of the structure by District officials.

David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commission; Nathan C. Wyeth, municipal architect, and Judges Ellen K. Raedy and Armand Scott, went along.

Judge Raedy said:

"It's lovely, beautiful, and I want everyone to see it. We'll have a grand opening some time in June."

The courtrooms in the new building are ready. Lack of furniture and fixtures in the judges' chambers is all that holds up the opening.

Lothian Urges U. S. Leniency In Mail Seizure

Admits 'Irritation,' But Calls It Vital To Waging of War

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 19.—Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, called upon Americans tonight to take a "lenient view" toward his country's examination of American mails on ships, saying it was "a vital part of our economic warfare."

In an address before the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, the Ambassador said the British realized it caused "irritation," but added "this important channel of communication with Germany" cannot be given up "without serious prejudice to our prosecution of the war."

Calls Nazis Ruthless

The speaker declared "German trade continues and German agents are at work trying to defeat the blockade" and said it was of "essential importance everywhere, including this country, that we should watch the mails."

Throughout his address Lord Lothian charged Nazi Germany with "utterly ruthless use of violence and despotism for the purpose of territorial expansion and domination."

Peace can only come, he said, from "superior power behind law."

"The dictators saw their opportunity, created power for themselves and began to remake the world in their own image," the Ambassador asserted.

"What matters more than anything else is that at the end of this war the superiority of power should rest unmistakably in the hands not of the dictatorships but of the free peoples so that it will be they and not the totalitarians who will determine the future."

Lord Lothian asserted the Allies were convinced that "in the end we are going to win, though not perhaps before the world has become a different place from what it is today."

"We do not believe that individual freedom can be permanently extinguished or national freedom permanently destroyed," he said. "The world is going to remain a free world, though before that objective is made secure and unemployment abolished for good, the nations which believe in freedom may well have to take more far reaching steps than any of us yet realize.

"For the real remedy for the present tragedy is not mere victory in the war but wiser thinking and better organization, both political and economic, among ourselves. In the long run example is more powerful than the sword."

Disillusioned About Hitler

In the early years of Hitler's rise, the ambassador said, many persons in England believed he sought only equal rights for Germany, freedom from any discrimination which might have been imposed by the Versailles Treaty.

"But gradually it became clear," he said, "that Hitler and the Nazi regime were not concerned merely with equal rights for Germany; that what Hitler really wanted was not equality but domination."

Britain and the United States have been able to live at peace and maintain the world's largest navies, Lothian said, because both subscribe to the Monroe Doctrine.

"The security of the Monroe system," he said, "has hitherto rested on the fact that the naval bases on both sides of the Atlantic were in the hands of powers which supported it. The problem of defending it would be transformed if it had to be upheld from one side of the Atlantic and if the other side were held by a power hostile to it."

The ambassador held that "a peace at present would only play into the hands of despotism."

"It would be no more than a truce," he said, "a short interval between two wars."

Postlude

Friday Morning Music Club presents last program of the season in the residence of Mrs. W. S. Corby. Artists: Louis Potter, organ and piano; Lyman McCrary, organ; Ruby Potter, soprano; Mary Apple, contralto; David Manley, tenor; Elwin Steffe, barytone.

Leaving familiar Barker Hall to accept the hospitality of a member, the Friday Morning Music Club met for the last concert of the season yesterday in the home of Mrs. W. S. Corby on Chevy Chase Circle. The change of locale permitted use of an organ in the unusual program arranged by Louis Potter, who participated as organist, pianist and accompanist. He began with a short recital at the console, playing three Bach choral - preludes — "Wachet auf," "In dir ist Freude"—Liszt's "Sposalizio", and the "Finlandia" of Sibelius.

Lyman McCrary was his assistant in the performance of a transcription of Cesar Franck's symphonic poem, "Les Djinns," originally scored for orchestra and solo piano. This work, inexplicably missing from the average orchestral repertoire, reveals the objective side of Frank's mysticism as applied to a poem by Victor Hugo, and abounds in beauty of a symbolic implication.

In the presentation of the song cycle, "In Fairyland," by the English composer, Robert Orlando Morgan, Mr. Potter was the accompanist to a vocal quartet constituted of Ruby Potter, Mary Apple, David Manley and Edwin Steffe. These delightful and imaginative songs consisted of settings of poems by Shakespeare, Thomas Hood, Keats, Sarah Williams, Marston, Symington and Felicia Hemans. The program closed with two more organ solos by Mr. Potter: "Walthers Preislied" and Mulet's "Carillon Sortie."

Contracts Are Let To School Industry In Arms Making

The Army and industry yesterday cooperated to beat linotype machines and auto steering gears into guns.

Under a $128,953 "educational order" placed yesterday by the War Department, the Mergenthaler Co. will turn out a small number of aiming mechanisms for field guns so its factories can readily shift from making typesetters to munitions in case of war.

At the same time, the Saginaw Steering Gear division of General Motors contracted for $726,004 to produce a few Browning machine guns so it can make weapons instead of wheels in an emergency.

Conferees Draft Bill to Regulate All Transport

Modified 1939 Plan Ready to Be Sent To Both Houses

By Milton Magruder
United Press Staff Writer

An agreement was reached last night by Senate and House conferees on a modified form of the transportation bill of 1939 which would impose uniform Federal regulation on rail, water and motor carriers for the first time in the Nation's history.

The report of the conferees, which must be approved by both houses before the legislation goes to President Roosevelt, who urged its adoption, eliminated provisions designed to encourage railway consolidations as well as safeguards for the jobs of rail workers in the event of such mergers.

Chairman Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, declined to reveal complete details of the agreement until after the measure has come from the hands of Congressional draftsmen.

"I think we have a very good bill," he said. "Its provisions will be very fair to water carriers because the conferees leaned over backwards to protect their interests. The same is true of the truck and bus interests."

He revealed that the rail consolidation and rail employment provisions were removed after the conferees became deadlocked.

"We tried for days to work out provisions protecting labor in the event the consolidation provisions were left in, but we were unable to agree upon them and, therefore, decided to take out all references to mergers," Wheeler said.

The regulatory agency under the new measure will be the Interstate Commerce Commission. Wheeler said that I. C. C. Commissioner Joseph Eastman had given assurance that his agency would feel bound to encourage the use of each form of travel instead of "doing what the Supreme Court said had to be done under the 1920 Act—that is, promote only the interests of the railways."

The bill was one of the most fiercely fought pieces of legislation to come before Congress since the New Deal came into power. Introduced by Wheeler in January, 1939, it was passed by the Senate in June and by the House in July. Conferees began work on it on February 1.

Chief proponents of the expanded regulation were the Administration and powerful railroad interests. Railway spokesmen contended that the industry could not successfully compete with water carriers and other transport services unless all were regulated alike.

Major foe of the measure was the Inland Waterways Corporation, whose spokesman said they would be unable to compete against the railroads unless given a free hand.

Martial Law Is Declared In All Holland

Nazi Assemblies Stopped to Prevent Any Internal Coup

By J. Reilly O'Sullivan
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Hague, April 19.—All Holland was placed under martial law tonight in a royal decree more far-reaching than any since the constitution guaranteed civil rights to the Netherlands 92 years ago.

This action was taken to permit more drastic measures against persons within the nation who are imperiling Netherlands neutrality or who would endanger its safety if Holland were invaded.

It was invoked just after old Premier Derek Jan de Geer, in a broadcast to home and empire on two sides of the world, had declared that Holland would resist "by force of arms" any attempt by a foreign power to extend "preventive" help to the Netherlands.

Even before Queen Wilhelmina signed today's all-embracing decree, Holland had been dotted with hundreds of "islands" of martial law, at points which were important to the country's elaborate and secret system of land, sea and water-line defenses.

Authoritative Netherlanders said that loyal, law-abiding citizens would not be inconvenienced, and that there would be little interference with civil administration.

But spies, active belligerent-sympathizers and foreigners conspiring against the government will be dealt with sternly. The military may take action from imposing a censorship to calling up civilians for military service or labor.

Several announced meetings of National Socialists (Dutch Nazis) have been prevented and police have conducted searches for arms. Yesterday such a search was conducted at the Limburg Castle of Count Max of Marchant, et D'Ansembourg, Nazi member of Parliament.

De Geer disclosed the martial law decision in his speech. He said:

"We have received assurances from both belligerents that they will safeguard this neutrality of ours. We trust today these assurances can be relied upon.

"But, in any case, we wish to make it perfectly clear that we, ourselves, are perfectly able as well as determined to protect our neutrality.

"I wish to take this occasion to point out that Holland, at any rate, does not ask for, and is unwilling, to accept the aid of any third power to maintain its neutrality."

The premier repeated the offers made by Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold of the Belgians, of the Low Countries' good offices to bring about peace.

These developments followed by a Netherlands demarche to Japan that Holland is neither seeking nor accepting from any nation protection for its East Indian possessions.

Armies Gather Near Trondheim

habitants of Karing Island claim to have heard a heavy cannonade far out at sea yesterday, both in the forenoon and in the afternoon —a cannonade so heavy that it shook the windows on the island. All the inhabitants could see, however, were several German planes far out at sea.

The situation in Narvik still lacks clarification, but it appears that the Germans have rushed strong reinforcements to that point by plane, and, according to latest reports, they are not only in the town itself, but are also trying to advance northward, toward Tromsoe, despite Norwegian opposition.

However, 18 German soldiers and 3 Nazi officers from the Narvik forces, who had lost their way in the snowy waste, have crossed into Swedish territory and have been interned.

Further details about the battle of Kongsvinger indicate that the brunt of the fighting was borne by an international brigade of 135 volunteers, just returned from Finland. According to accounts brought to Sweden by 35 survivors, the brigade lost no less than 100 men in five days of constant battle.

The survivors claim that when the brigade arrived at Kongsvinger, retreating Norwegians had already demolished the fortifications and were about to demolish the forts' guns dating back from 1894. The brigade protested and when a Norwegian officer insisted on it, he was arrested, though he was released when it was shown that he was acting under orders from higher authority.

In any case, the survivors recount that the volunteers searched for and found gun parts that fit and put one of the guns in commission again. Using it to supplement their machine guns, they held Kongsvinger for several days.

However, the Norwegians themselves are said to have inflicted the heaviest punishment on the Germans when they blew up a dam of the Glommen River while 200 Germans were crossing it on the ice. All of them, says the report, were caught by the onrushing waters and many dragged down by their heavy equipment were drowned. The Norwegians admit that their own casualties amounted to several hundred.

Swedish press dispatches from Oslo, which presumably have passed the German censorship, state that life in the Norwegian capital is returning to normal. Hotels, theaters and dance halls have reopened but find little attendance, for one reason because the people evacuated from Oslo refused to return despite appeals from the authorities, and the dispatches hint at extensive sabotage against the German rule.

According to Norwegian claims, the German occupation even of the Oestfold is still confined to towns and the connecting roads and the forts of the Fossum Line are still holding out. Moreover, say the Norwegian accounts, volunteers are still hiding in the woods and are conducting guerrilla warfare against the German forces. Their fate when caught is indicated by a statement issued by the German military authorities charging that these guerrillas are using dum dum bullets and will therefore be shot without trial.

The Norwegian government has announced that Norwegian troops have now established contact with the Allied naval and air forces and that the first British officers are now active at the secret Norwegian headquarters.

P. program committee, and Wendell Willkie, utilities executive and dark-horse Presidential possibility. William Allen White, veteran editor of the Emporia Gazette, laid down field rules for the off-the-record debate.

Other highlights of the convention's 14-hour day, which began with a "Shop Talk Breakfast" in the Willard, included:

Election of Tom Wallace, editor of the Louisville Times, as president of the society, succeeding Donald J. Sterling, of the Portland, Oreg., Journal.

Coghlan Outlines Dangers

Coghlan told the editors that if his contempt conviction were upheld, it might "prove to be only preliminary to a concerted, Nation-wide campaign to infringe upon the freedom of the press."

The Missouri court's action is not derived from the American Constitution, but is based on "the outmoded European doctrine of the divine right of kings—the theory that the courts are simply an extension of the monarch's authority," he said.

Coghlan proposed that judges be denied the power to invoke contempt proceedings for comment on cases which have left the jury and that persons charged with contempt for publication be indicted and given jury trial.

Earlier yesterday the news executives heard from James M. Thomson, publisher of the New Orleans Item-Tribune, that Huey Long mastered every detail of dictatorship except press control.

Thompson, who began his newspaper career as a Washington Post reporter in 1898, asserted that the American people would speedily lose their liberties if their newspapers lost independence.

Even conceding to the press "all the faults that our enemies claim," he said he had seen the country's newspapers grow consistently fairer, more liberal and "more sympathetic to the interests of all the people."

The rest of the country still does not realize how close to absolute dictatorship Long came, he continued. "Long was moving toward a dictatorship as iron-clad as that of Stalin, Hitler or Mussolini, the publisher stated, and his "ultimate purpose was to do to the United States what he had done to Louisiana."

Recent exposures of corruption in Louisiana and the election of Sam Jones as Governor "put Louisiana back into the Union," Thomson said. He pointed out, however, that a shift of 10,000 votes would have continued Earl Long, Huey's brother, in power, adding that "if any one or two of the larger newspapers had laid down on the job, the Long regime might still be in control."

Finns Disliked Publicity

Wallace R. Deuel, United Press correspondent who covered the Russo-Finnish war, said "Marshal Mannerheim and his staff never could be convinced that war is fought with words as well as bullets.' Finnish military authorities never issued regular communiques, he stated, and Mannerheim met the press only once—to read a one-paragraph statement.

Two persistent rumors of the war, checked by every correspondent but never confirmed, told of Russian soldiers locked into their tanks and Polish prisoners driven ahead of the Soviet forces to explode land mines, Deuel related.

The society at its final session voted to "salute with pride" the country's foreign correspondents. These reporters, according to the resolution, have overcome censorship, faulty communications and personal danger to keep the United States better informed on foreign affairs than any other nation.

Other business, transacted by the society included election of M. V. Atwood, associate editor of the Gannett newspapers, Rochester, N. Y., as first vice president; Dwight Marvin, editor of the Troy (N. Y.) Record, second vice president; Nathaniel Howard, editor of the Cleveland News, secretary; E. S. Beck, assistant editor in chief, Chicago Tribune, treasurer.

Nazis Tighten Economic Belt, Funk Says

wegian torpedoboat on the west coast of Norway.

On German orders to be out of the country by midnight, Arne Scheel, Norwegian Minister to Berlin, and other members of the Norwegian diplomatic staff and their families left by special train. Minister of Propaganda Goebbels, in a radio address on the eve of Adolf Hitler's fifty first birthday, said the Fuehrer "has the complete love and the complete obedience of his people" and British efforts "to sow the seeds of disunity among us" were doomed to failure.

Economic Bin Scraped

So determined is the Nazi regime to make good Hitler's New Year's promise to force the war to a decision during 1940 that business and industry are being combed systematically for machinery and reserve stocks not needed now.

Funk, addressing the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Reichsbank, therefore stressed not only the "rationing of essential needs" but also the restriction of production of consumers' goods, progressive reduction of stocks and refraining from investing in replacements.

Economic bin-scraping, in other words, is one of Germany's most effective methods of financing the war.

In business circles it is heard more and more that the economics ministry is about to decree the scrapping of all machinery lying idle against the time when peacetime productions of consumers' goods can be resumed, the machinery to be made available for munitions.

Observers suggested that if this rumor were well founded it would seem that Funk took the occasion diplomatically to prepare the public mind for it.

Funk further left no doubt that all available liquid cash somehow must flow into Germany's war chest.

It is not desirable psychologically to tax increased earnings away, he said, but he warned that these liquid assets nevertheless "must be made available to the Reich via savings banks and the credit market."

Still Not at War

While the Wilhelmstrasse took the step of ordering the Norwegian Minister and his staff out of the country, authorized sources asserted no state of war between Norway and Germany existed.

"King Haakon's statements and proclamations were of such a nature that it was no longer possible to tolerate the presence of his representative in Berlin," it was explained.

The general picture gained from the high command's communique and other German reports was that Germany's forces systematically are mopping up Norwegian forces and at the same time extending themselves into Norway as rapidly as possible.

As in previous days the high command said the flow of troops to Norway was continuing "on schedule."

Hitler's birthday will be celebrated throughout the nation and on into the German-occupied portions of Scandinavia, but in subdued fashion because of the war.

"We are not asking for parades and fanfare," Goebbels said.

Rudolf Hess, Deputy leader of the Nazi Party, will speak tomorrow morning and Baldur von Schirach, head of the Hitler youth organization, now a corporal in the army, will broadcast best wishes to the Fuehrer from the Western Front tomorrow night.

The nation's birthday gift to Hitler is a collection of metal which has been growing steadily for weeks.

Planes Aid Narvik Force

Lulea, Sweden, April 19 (U.P.).—Huge German bomber-transport planes landed mountain artillery, munitions, food and supplies at Rombak Heights all day yesterday and today for the Nazi force holding the Norwegian port of Narvik, according to reliable reports reaching here tonight.

The arrival of these six-ton planes bore out yesterday's reports that the Germans intend to hold Narvik against British and Norwegian attack until the bitter end.

With fresh supplies apparently assured to them by plane, the Germans were reported consolidating their positions there as much as possible before the British and Norwegians strike in force.

Refugees from Narvik reaching Sweden today said the Germans had ousted small British landing parties from the village of Ankenes, across Narvik Bay, thus putting another Fjord between themselves and the main British force.

Mrs. Harriman Returning to Aid Citizens in Norway

Stockholm (Saturday), April 20 (INS).—Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway, arrived in Saerna on the Swedish frontier early today en route to Lillehammer, Norway, to rescue American women refugees.

The 70-year-old Minister said she had not been ill but was in good health, offering as proof that she can motor over the rough Norwegian roads day and night. She said she would return the women, isolated in Lillehammer, to a safe location, possibly in Sweden.

Mrs. Harriman said that she had conferred with the Norwegian Red Cross chief, Dr. Paus, who revealed that Norway needed food, clothes and gasoline.

The American-Finnish ambulance corps which returned from Finland within the last few days to serve with the Norwegian army also passed through Saerna during the night.

Yugoslavia, Russia Open Trade Talks

Move Said to Have Axis Approval; New Offers Made to Tokyo

By Henry Shapiro
United Press Staff Writer

Moscow, April 19.—Russia is preparing moves in the Balkans and the Far East which may prove of far-reaching importance in connection with the European war, it was understood tonight.

The moves are:

A resumption of negotiations for a Russo-Japanese trade agreement, which came to a standstill a fortnight ago. These negotiations long have been envisaged as preliminary to a broad Russo-Japanese political understanding which might lead to a Russo-Japanese plan to end the Chinese-Japanese war and cooperation to prevent the European war from spreading to the Far East.

The opening of negotiations with Yugoslavia for a Russo-Yugoslav trade agreement which, presumably, would be a preliminary to resumption of full diplomatic relations between the two powers. Diplomatic relations have been broken for 22 years and Yugoslavia has been the leading anti-Russian power in the Balkans.

While there was no direct evidence that Germany inspired either move it was no secret that both steps were highly satisfactory to Berlin.

Italy, which dominates Yugoslavia, was believed to have approved the negotiations between Moscow and Belgrade, indicating that the Italian government may have abandoned its anti-Russian program and be ready to accept a reported German plan for a united front among Germany, Italy and Russia in the Balkans.

The Russo-Japanese conversations are being pushed actively, it was said.

May Appease British

London, April 19 (AP).—Soviet circles in London, representing Russia as a maintaining a hands-off attitude in the present spread of the European war to the north, today predicted a British-Russian trade agreement would be concluded shortly.

Friction between London and Moscow became intense during the Russian-Finnish war, but a Soviet source said it now had eased somewhat. He pictured Russia as more interested in domestic affairs and in cleaning up the Finnish situation than in the tumult in western Europe.

Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London, is reported to have presented Britain with a new proposal for a trade pact shortly after Easter.

Swedish Navy Full of Nais, Editor Charges

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Sweden, April 19.—Though fighting continued today near Elverum and Trondheim, both close to the Swedish frontier, Sweden seemed more preoccupied with the home front and "the enemies within our country," as one commentator called them. For Sweden is determined to be ready for the ordeal of war if it comes.

While the immediate danger seemed diminished as compared with last Thursday, when soldiers in the south of Sweden were on the alert, one official said it was good that the danger was still visible. "It keeps up on our toes," he said.

A somewhat sensational—perhaps unduly sensational — article appeared today in a weekly paper called "Trots Allt" under the heading "Sweden's navy betrayed." Despite this heading, the purport of the article was not that the navy was full of traitors, but that some members of it had shown Nazi sympathy and must be watched to prevent betrayal.

The editor, Gure Nerman, a former member of parliament, is a left wing Socialist more radical than the government groups, who, competent observers say, are sincerely fighting against dictatorship of both varieties.

The Nazis in Sweden have never been strong, polling at a maximum about 20,000 votes. They have never been able to get one of the 230 seats in parliament.

Employment Week Begins May 1

President Roosevelt yesterday proclaimed the first week in May as National Employment Week "to the end that interest in the welfare of all the unemployed, and especially the worker over 40, may be stimulated and employment extended to all."

Recalling that 250,000 placements were made during last year's national employment week, he urged all churches, organizations and individuals to make an effort again this year to increase employment. The week will begin May 1, and May 5 will be National Employment Sunday.

Deputies Vote Confidence In Reynaud

515 Back Cabinet, Only 16 Abstaining From the Balloting

By Lansing Warren.
Copyright by New York Times

Paris, April 19.—After a secret sitting lasting nearly all day the Chamber of Deputies by 515 votes proclaimed its confidence tonight in the Reynaud war cabinet. There were 16 abstentions.

The vote gives a clear indication that, in the present emergency, Premier Reynaud has rallied Parliament's support.

When the Senate, which accorded its confidence after meeting three days in secret, the Chamber, too, postponed its questions on general policy, expressing itself as satisfied that the government was firm in its conduct of the war.

Reynaud announced that matters of general policy would be later given an airing in open debate.

Both Edouard Daladier and Reynaud, it is understood, replied for the government before the sitting was open to the public. Then it was announced that a motion had been made declaring faith in the conduct of the war and the first paragraph of this motion was a grateful salutation to the Allied forces on the land, the sea and the air, and to the heroic Norwegian people. The second paragraph declaring confidence in the government "to continue to victory the war policy which had always been approved by Parliament."

M. Reynaud tonight conferred at length with the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Hugh Campbell.

England Cuts U. S. Cotton Quota

London, April 19 (AP).—The ministry of shipping today cut in half the May quota of space for cotton shipments from the United States to Britain. The ministry informed the Liverpool Cotton Association space would be allocated to bring in only 50,000 bales of cotton in May instead of the expected 100,000.

The move was designed to conserve shipping space for United States warplanes and Army trucks.

Princess Elizabeth To Be 14 Tomorrow

London, April 19 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth, oldest daughter of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, will be 14 years old Sunday, but her main birthday celebration will be tomorrow, when she will entertain her mother and father and a few other guests at a quiet tea. There is no program for Sunday other than church attendance.

British Hear Italy Plans Protectorate in Yugoslavia

Copyright by New York Times

London, April 19.—Unconfirmed reports here tonight said that the British Ambassador to Rome had been informed of Italian intention to establish a protectorate of the south coast of Yugoslavia.

That there was no confirmation does not necessarily mean it has not happened, but it does mean that if such information has been given, it is being kept most secret among a few political and military leaders.

That some move into Yugoslavia might well be the first Italian action since the war started has long been suspected here. Whether formal notice has been given seems doubtful on the basis of available evidence which is not much. Mussolini usually does not telegraph his punches.

All reports such as this are regarded with particularly jaundiced eyes here because it is believed that many of them have their origin in German sources.

By the Associated Press

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, April 19.—Yugoslavian authorities announced tonight they had discovered a plot to overthrow the government and turn the country over to the Nazis. The government interned former Premier Milan Stoyadinovic, "friend of Germany," in a lonely and inaccessible mountain hamlet.

Police raids on the homes of hundreds of Germans were disclosed in connection with the alleged "Fifth Column" plot.

Stoyadinovic was taken into custody today and moved from Belgrade under heavy guard to internment on a mountain 80 miles south of the capital to isolate him from foreign agents and his own Yugoslav colleagues, who fell from power with him a year ago.

"We want no Quislings, no Henleins, no Hachas, no Seyszinquarts in Yugoslavia," said one official. He was referring to Germany's "front men" in the invasion of Norway, the Sudeten country, Szechi-Slovakia proper and Austria.

A police raid Tuesday midnight on Stoyadinovic's home produced documents which, authorities said, linked the former premier with Nazi "Trojan horse" activity in Yugoslavia. It was considered possible some of his followers also would be interned. They are under police watch.

The village where Stoyadinovic was taken is cut off almost completely from the outside. Police said cryptically, "Even an airplane cannot land there."

Raids were made on the homes of many Germans living near the German frontier, and arms and documents were taken. The latter, police said, showed up the plot for an uprising of the German minority, to be timed with the entry into Yugoslavia of the German army.

The raids in this region, which has 40,000 Germans, were facilitated by discovery of a membership list of the Swabian-German Cultural Bund, which the police say is pro-Nazi.

Professor of Character

• People often spoke of Prof. Williams* as a "character builder" because so many outstanding men had come out of his classes.

But he scoffed at the idea. "You can't mold a man's character in four years," he said, "though you can make a good start in four generations."

Character isn't built in a day. It isn't something you can apply to the surface. It grows slowly, from the inside out.

We sincerely believe that Quaker State is the finest motor oil made.

Partly because it is made from the finest Pennsylvania crude oil.

Partly because it is refined with extreme care in the most modern refineries. But most of all because since the early days of the automobile we have been making only superlative lubricants and wouldn't know how to make any other kind. Quaker State Oil Refining Corp., Oil City, Pa.

German Firm Leases Forest In Rumania

Carol Ends Session Of Parliament After Agreement

By the United Press

Bucharest, April 19.—The Rumanian parliament today leased to the German D. F. H. G. Co. 34,000 Hectares (83,980 acres) of choice forest land.

The German company will build two railroads on the large tract and will exploit it with Rumanian labor employed on a large scale.

Shortly after this act of parliament, King Carol closed the session by royal decree "in accord with the constitution."

[The Associated Press reported from Bucharest that negotiation of a new German-Rumanian trade payment treaty was concluded last night. The dispatch said Germany is to receive greater customs facilities and her wheat purchases are to continue on the scale in effect prior to the recent Rumanian embargo on wheat exports to the Reich.]

Part of Development Pact

Announcement of the lease of forest land to the German company said that the contract was regarded as an annex to the Wholthat agreement—by which Rumanian resources were to be developed by Germany—and that a temporary agreement had been reached between the Rumanian and German governments on September 29, 1939.

Rumanian military authorities at first opposed the lease on the grounds the land occupied an important startegic position.

The forest is among the best in the Carpathian Mountains. It joins a tract of over 3,000 hectares owned by King Carol's brother, Nicholas. Germany is eager to lease other forests but owing to opposition by the Rumanian army it is not believed other leases will be considered in the near future.

[Dispatches from Bucharest earlier in the week indicated the lease would be made as a gesture of appeasement by King Carol in face of larger Nazi economic demands.]

Change in Government

Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, Rumania, April 19.—It was officially confirmed today that there is to be a change in the cabinet and Parliament. It is pointed out that, in view of the complete change that is about to take place in Rumania's political life, the activities of the present Parliament will not be necessary.

All former political parties will take part in the new cabinet formation, including the Iron Guard and the Cuza anti-Semetic group.

The reports current yesterday that Col. Kazunov, chief of the second bureau of the general staff, and Prof. Virgil Madgearu had been murdered, were officially denied.

The marshal of the court, Baron Flondor, and the palace minister, Ernest Urdareanu, have been generally blamed for the policy pursued so far and have consequently resigned.

Invasion Hint Drives Aliens From Hungary

Allied Colonists Flee, Air-Raid Squads Patrol Budapest

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Hungary (Saturday), April 20.—Numerous members of the British and French colonies moved out of Budapest last night and early today because of rumors in Allied quarters that Hungary was in danger of German invasion.

Although Hungarians discounted such rumors as alarmist, the government appeared to be taking special precautions.

Searchlights swept the sky over Budapest throughout the night and air-raid protection squads patroled the streets.

Among the departing Britons were newspaper correspondents, who moved their headquarters to Belgrade. There also was a report that some documents of the French legation had been taken to Belgrade. A speedy truck stood in the courtyard of the British legation, ready for the rapid transfer of documents, should this seem necessary.

While there is also considerable concern over the safety of Yugoslavia, Belgrade is regarded as less cut off than Budapest in case of a sudden thrust.

The British and French sources which gave credence to the rumors said that Hungary is attractive to Germany as a key position in the Balkans.

Belgium Interns Aliens to Avert Espionage

By International News Service

Brussels, April 19.—Premier Pierlot announced tonight that "thousands" of aliens in Belgium have been interned to insure the nation against internal espionage and sabotage in case of an invasion.

The national police have been augmented and guards stationed at all vital places. Reiterating Belgium's resolve to remain neutral, coupled with determination to resist if attacked, Pierlot affirmed:

"Not knowing with certainty what tomorrow may bring, let us prepare both for peace and for war."

Pierlot declared:

"Belgium has pursued unfailingly a policy of independence. She has been for a long time surrounded with danger. No one can say how the drama will end for her.

"Belgium cherishes the hope and desire that she will remain at peace.

"We are between two of the most powerful lines of fortification: the world has ever seen.

"If we are dragged into war, our country would be ravaged and covered with ruins, while the territory of the great belligerent powers would remain almost intact.

"The future is in God's hands. If he confronts us with trials, let us be ready to face them."

office in the ceremony which followed. The two new honorary vice presidents general, Mrs. Gerald Livingston Schuyler, of Denver, and Mrs. William Henderson Vaught, of Point Pleasant, W. Va., were then presented to the audience.

The resolution against a Federal department of education based disapproval on the fact that education is one of the powers "not delegated" to the United States Government by the Constitution, but is left with the States.

New By-Laws Weighed

A large part of the closing business session was given over to matters affecting the operation of the national society.

The Congress voted down a proposed amendment to the by-laws which would have abolished future elections of honorary vice presidents general.

The congress also voted down a proposed amendment to the constitution which would have created the office of "genealogist general." In the discussion of that proposal, an official said that the duties of such an office were already carried on by the registrar general.

She said if the amendment were adopted, "two women would be answering the same questions" and that the resulting confusion would mean that, instead of waiting a few months for answers to questions on genealogy, "you might have to wait the rest of your natural lives."

The Congress set up the mechanism for electing three vice presidents general with definite rank, an innovation which had been adopted at an earlier session.

Fulton Lewis, jr., radio commentator, speaking on "Radio—New Bulwark of Americanism," made the only address at the closing session.

Mrs. Jacob Fredrich Zimmerman, of Harvey, Ill., national chairman of press relations, reported that the D. A. R. had received publicity in the various States, which, "conservatively estimated, could not be purchased under $1,500,000."

The genealogical committee, of which Dr. Jean Stephenson, of Washington is chairman, reported that "its members do not make speeches or get even the back pages of the newspapers. Instead they sit in drafty courthouses in poor light, search dusty attics and old closets in churches, ruin shoes and stockings and risk meeting snakes in burying grounds, to locate and copy records."

Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, of Washington, was installed as State regent for the District of Columbia, with Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke as vice regent.

Mrs. George Hamilton Stapp, of Baltimore, took office as State regent for Maryland, with Mrs. Adelbert Warren Meara as vice regent.

they said, would be one of the richest prizes of the war. By gaining possession of Trondheim, the Allies could turn the tables on Germany with a base for operations against the Nazis in Denmark as well as against Germany's hitherto inviolate Baltic ports, these persons explained.

Trondheim is such an important position, they pointed out, that the Germans may even be content to dig in along a line extending eastward from Trontheim to the Swedish border without attempting to push farther northward.

In the face of these discouraging reports, newspaper military experts sought to hearten themselves and their readers by pointing out that the German expeditionary force must lack heavy artillery and large supplies of ammunition, since it would be impossible to transport these by air.

Britons "Amphibious"

There was none of this feeling apparent, however, at the welcome for the homecoming sailormen.

Churchill paid tribute to the Hardy's captain, Warburton Lee, who, he said, "took the responsibility of ordering this determined attack upon the enemy and sealed his great decision with his life." He then added:

"But you, although your vessel was sunk, did not hesitate, with rifles in your hands, to carry on the war on another element and thus prove again the amphibious character of Britons and our navy."

The first lord of the admiralty characteristically saved the day's choice piece of admiralty news for his own speech. In his address he revealed that the seamen included not only those from the Hardy, which was run aground and abandoned in the first British attack on German warships at Narvik April 10, but also men from the Eclipse, which was damaged by Nazi bombs but was able to return to her base.

Denmark Rejects British Demand To Transfer Ships

New York, April 19 (AP).—The Danish shipping committee tonight rejected a British demand that Danish ships transfer to either British or French registry—or run the risk of seizure by the Allies as enemy vessels.

Breaking its silence after a week-long study of the problem brought on by extension of the war to Scandinavia, the committee announced also that it was still seeking assurances from the British and French governments that Danish flag vessels outside Denmark remain unrestrained.

This indicated that pending further study and negotiations Danish ships—the country has a merchant fleet of more than 700 vessels—would remain idle in the neutral harbors to which they were ordered last week.

The strike, it was stated tonight, was abandoned without any weakening in the decision of the government to resist the demands made upon it.

British Sailor From Destroyer Hardy Gives Description of Fight at Narvik

By the Associated Press

London, April 19.—Petty Officer Edward Baggley, of the British destroyer Hardy, gave a blow-by-blow description today of the first battle of Narvik, on April 10, in which the destroyer Hunter was sunk and the Hardy run aground.

In a blinding snowstorm Baggley said, the Hardy led four other destroyers up Narvik Fjord just after midnight.

Then, after nearly running aground, they went into action.

"We sighted our targets and out came our torpedoes," Baggley related. "There were so many ships there, both warships and cargo ships, that it was impossible to miss them.

"The gunnery officer spotted a German destroyer and we opened fire.

Germans Fire At Sky

"The signalman said the first salvo went straight through her bows. Torpedoes started exploding, with a million sparks going high into the air.

"The German ship opened fire with her pom-poms, thinking she was being attacked from the air. Either our gunfire or our torpedoes set fire to the jetty.

"Then we went around a bend, the other destroyers following and firing their torpedoes. The gunners then had a dim outline at which to fire and thousands of shells were bursting all over the place.

"We altered our course and came around for another run and blazed away with our guns at a German destroyer.

Fort Put Out of Action

"A large English merchant ship lay in a position partly protecting her. With our second salvo we put out of action a fort near the harbor. We blazed away again and when we altered our course we found three German destroyers and concentrated the fire of all our destroyers on those three.

"The enemy replied. We altered our course again and the other ships wheeled around and then we sighted two more German ships on the other side of the fjord on our port bow.

"Two German destroyers tried to head us off from the exit and a salvo fell on us.

"I heard a terrific bang and there was a great crash.

"From this time on the other ships carried on independently.

Swam 100 Yards

"We lost all headway and gradually drifted toward the beach. One of our guns still was firing as we went aground. We let off our final torpedo.

"Then the order 'Abandon ship' was given and with just rubber lifebelts on we swam 100 yards to shore."

A 20-year-old seaman of the Hardy, William Wilkinson, told how "one shell burst near me, shrapnel flying all around us like a cloud."

Three Friends Killed

"Seven of us were manning the gun and three of my chums were killed," he recounted. He said the survivors walked to a village where they were made at home in the local schoolroom. On Saturday, April 13, they saw British warships pass up the fjord.

"They disappeared around the bend and we heard heavy firing," he continued. "Judging from the noise it must have been some battle."

A stoker on the Hardy, Arthur Baker, said that on Saturday one of the Hardy's officers commandeered a motorboat and signaled a British warship. The survivors were picked up.

At Trondheim

The developing struggle for Trondheim, the ancient capital and one of the most important ports of modern Norway, should furnish the first real indication of the relative strengths which Great Britain and Germany are throwing into the Scandinavian arena.

While neither side appears as yet to have troops in force around Trondheim, it is nevertheless obviously there, or thereabouts, that decisive fighting will soon take place. The city has an excellent harbor, and its strategic position, half-way to Narvik up the long Atlantic coast of Norway, would make it an ideal base for British ships and planes. Offensive operations from here could greatly hamper the effectiveness of German air bases farther down the coast, whence bombing expeditions against Britain's northern industrial area are all too feasible.

If Trondheim is important as a port, it is not less so as a railroad center. The city has excellent rail connections with Oslo, 384 miles to the south. And it is also the terminus of an important line to central Sweden, for whose products it is the logical outlet. Tremendous leverage can be exercised on Swedish policy by the nation which holds Trondheim.

For these reasons it is not to be expected that the Germans, particularly after experiencing the British attack on Narvik, will yield Trondheim without a very serious struggle. And by the same token the city is certain to be a focus point of operations by the British expeditionary force and those troops which the legitimate Norwegian government has been able to muster in the northern part of that mountainous country. Indeed, the present picture at Trondheim provides the first real clarification of the confusion and uncertainty which have characterized the scene in Norway for the past ten days.

It is ironic that a city of which many Americans had never heard until two weeks ago, which still fewer know by its correct name of Nidaros, which for generations has seen peaceful and pleasant living at the head of a deep and beautiful fjord, should now seem to be destined as the location of a bitter military campaign. One may be certain that not a single citizen of old Trondheim, seat of the cathedral where Norway's sovereigns are crowned, desired involvement in this war. But nonetheless the war has come to them.

Unsubstantial Victory

The C. I. O. has won a sweeping victory over the A. F. of L. in the poll of General Motors Corporation employes supervised by the NLRB. Seemingly the younger organization has gained exclusive rights to represent about 125,000 workers in 53 plants, while the A. F. of L. has carried only 5 plants employing less than 6,000 workers.

The vote cannot, however, be interpreted as a clear-cut triumph for the principle of industrial unionism as opposed to craft unionism. For the main body of the production employes will in any case be organized on an industrial basis with the plant as the bargaining unit, leaving a few small groups of skilled workers to be represented by craft unions.

The A. F. of L. is the recognized champion of craft unions, and the C. I. O. is properly regarded as the protagonist of industrial unionism. It must be remembered that the former embraces industrial unions with a large membership, while the latter has in a number of instances sponsored the craft union form of organization. Nevertheless, the emphasis placed upon the craft instead of the industry as the basis of unionism has seriously retarded organization of the mass-production industries by the A. F. of L. The C. I. O., therefore, deserves full credit for forcing the pace of organization in this hitherto neglected field of activity, notably in the automobile industry.

A spokesman for the C. I. O. asserts that the General Motors election "ends the A. F. of L. in the automobile industry." It could be said with equal conviction that the election stresses the futility of the intensive struggle for control of the automobile workers. The great majority of General Motors employes will be brought into industrial unions, regardless of labels, simply because that type of union is best suited to the requirements of the industry. For small groups of skilled craftsmen the privilege of separate bargaining representation will continue to be accorded, if they indicate a preference for the craft as a basis of organization.

As neither the A. F. of L. nor the C. I. O. can lay claim to being the exclusive representative of either the industrial or the craft union, effective organization of the automobile industry does not in any sense depend upon which side wins an NLRB election. Personal antagonisms and the distrust bred of strife remain the chief obstacles to peaceful organization of this and other mass-production industries under united leadership.

The Shadow Advances

The proclamation of martial law in the Netherlands; the arrest and imprisonment of former Premier Stoyadinovich in Yugoslavia; the liberation of members of the Iron Guard who have been interned in Rumania—all these dramatic events in their several ways emphasize the terrible tensions in those European countries which still maintain an uneasy peace.

Of these three major developments the action taken yesterday at The Hague is the least unexpected. While Hitler's invasion of Scandinavia may have seemed temporarily to ease the pressure on the Netherlands, it has actually increased the economic, social and political strains. Even if the issue of disloyal and subversive elements is unimportant, the Dutch government is only showing elementary caution in giving the army power to supersede civil law for the period immediately ahead.

The arrest of Dr. Milan Stoyadinovich in Yugoslavia was less anticipated abroad, and, therefore, is rather more disquieting. Dr. Stoyadinovich was premier at Belgrade a little over a year ago. In spite of his recent loss of popularity he cannot be regarded as lacking influence and prestige throughout his country. Certainly the former premier would not be seized and incarcerated now if the step were not regarded as absolutely essential to Yugoslav security and independence.

Removal of restrictions on the pro-Nazi Iron Guard in Rumania is a step of diametrically opposite character. It is not the less significant for that. The Rumanian government clearly feels itself too isolated and too exposed to antagonize important domestic elements which favor a definitely pro-German policy. In Yugoslavia the possibilities of Allied assistance in the event of a German, or Italian, invasion are better. And the Cvetkovic government at Belgrade can also be more resolute because its solution of the Croatian problem has greatly assisted the development of national unity.

But whether the focus of attention is the stable, highly industrialized and long-established kingdom of the Netherlands, or the younger and more primitive agrarian states of Yugoslavia and Rumania, the underlying picture is the same. A dreadful sense of insecurity grips all the European neutrals, regardless of their economic, cultural and racial differences. In all of them measures which clearly reveal the underlying fear are being hastily taken in hope of warding off impending doom.

Had they been able or willing to act together, the individual weakness of these small neutrals would not now be so tragically revealed. But they would not combine. They could not establish voluntarily and on a democratic basis the unity which has become essential for modern Europe. So a different form of unity, a feared and hated repression of their ill-spent liberties, is threatening all alike. And to the north, the west, the south and the southeast, the neighbors of Germany tremble as the shadows of Hitler's developing continental system lengthen across their borders.

The Real McCoy

We suppose the thing to be said about the life and times of the late Norman E. Selby is that they have given us a useful metaphor for whatever is demonstrably genuine. Mr. Selby, in short, was "the real McCoy" and thus distinguished from all the pseudo McCoys with which, it seems, the world abounds.

When Norman Selby in the nineties chose the nom de guerre of Kid McCoy it was not with any notion of conferring additional glory on an already well-known family. It was rather to preserve the honorable name of Selby from the contamination of the prize ring. As far as can be ascertained, the Clan McCoy was not consulted about its feeling in the matter.

Anyhow, for something more than a decade, and in an age of such titans as Sullivan, Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Sharkey and Choynski, this Kid McCoy was famous as a gifted middleweight boxer and a formidable and, some say, none too chivalrous fighter. But whereas the later careers of Sullivan (who lived to become a temperance lecturer), and Corbett (who went into vaudeville and joined the Lambs Club), were mild, this McCoy continued to be a remarkable fellow to the very end.

There was his extraordinary domestic career, for instance. He was married ten times to a total of eight wives, thereby gaining the decision over Bluebeard by one point and over Henry VIII by two points. Moreover, he married one wife three times, a distinction to which the others had rendered themselves ineligible.

Meanwhile Kid McCoy had been a movie actor, had been arrested in connection with a fashionable jewel robbery and then exonerated; had been charged with murder and convicted; had served eight years in the San Quentin Penitentiary in such famous company as that of Messrs. Mooney and Billings and the Brothers Macnamara, and had spent his declining years protecting Ford Motor Co.'s workers from labor agitators and other inimical persons. Thursday he died by his own hand, weary, as he said, of "the world's madness."

We don't, we confess, know exactly what moral is to be found in this strange biography of a very strange man. We suspect, however, that it may hold certain consolations for other McCoys whose only claim to the title is the rather specious one of genealogy.

Appeal To The Courts

In face of Administration opposition the House has passed the Walter-Logan bill by the overwhelming vote of 282 to 97. The measure attempts to unify the procedure of Federal administrative agencies and to make certain that aggrieved citizens have the right of appeal to the courts for a review of administrative orders.

Representative Sumners, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, well indicated the chief objectives of the bill in a concluding speech before the House. The choice, he said, is either to subject the American people "to the governmental power of an appointed personnel which has all three powers of government under its control," or "to make it possible for the citizen to resort to the only place under the Anglo-Saxon system of government that an aggrieved person can go to, that is the courts."

It would be a serious mistake to assume that the Walter-Logan bill is aimed at any particular agency, or that it is in any sense intended to prevent the effective carrying out of New Deal regulatory policies. On the contrary, proponents claim that it would facilitate the work of administrative agencies. The fact that the bill itself is the outcome of prolonged study and discussion by lawyers and expert students of government is the best possible evidence that it is not colored by a partisan or anti-Administration bias.

In its present form the Walter-Logan bill may be defective in certain respects, as Representative Sumners freely admits, since it is a pioneer attempt to deal with an extremely difficult problem. Nonetheless, in voting for the measure, the House has given expression to a well-founded fear that democratic governmental institutions are endangered by the existence of bureaucratic agencies not themselves subject to adequate controls.

A vote for the bill does not imply hostility to the agencies affected by its provisions, nor a wish to hamper their functioning by unduly restricting their discretionary powers. The proposed legislation is designed simply to protect and preserve the basic rights of individuals in a democracy against the encroachments of Government agencies having the power to make, interpret and enforce rules which have the force of law.

Children's Crusade

It is a real deprivation for Washington's school children not to be able to participate in the Children's Crusade for Children which will be conducted throughout the Nation for a week beginning Monday. And it is rather ironic that the reason for this deprivation is the school board rule that money cannot be collected from the children without giving something in return. In this exceptional case, the little donors would probably gain a great deal more than they gave in pennies.

Although the crusade is designed to secure help for unfortunate European children from their lucky American contemporaries, its primary purpose is to make the American child more conscious of the liberties he enjoys. Thus, according to directors of the campaign, "it will be a continuing lesson in patriotism."

In other cities, where the crusade is officially encouraged, each child will be able to give a few pennies, up to as many as he or she is years old. No one will know how much any child has contributed and the entire sum collected will go to aid refugee children, as all the administrative expenses have been covered. An impartial jury of award will distribute the sum to responsible relief organizations.

This drive constitutes one of the few positive, hopeful gestures in the political and social scene today. As such it would play a useful role if very little money were raised. As planned, the total of tiny contributions should be of real assistance in relief of childhood suffering. Therefore it is to be hoped that, acting as they can in unofficial groups, Washington's children may still do their part.

If you would know the kind of stuff a person is made of, observe him closely when he acquires or loses a lot of money.

"A majority of the people in this country are leaning toward the New Deal," declares an Administration official. Toward it, or on it?

Symphony Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think it will be generally conceded that the duty of the leader of a labor union is to secure the best wages and working conditions possible for the men whom he represents. Therefore, no blame can be attached to the leader of the local Musicians' Protective Union for the original effort to get increased pay for the musicians in the National Symphony Orchestra.

After long negotiation, the union leader not only has not succeeded in getting increased pay for the men, but, on the contrary, has destroyed their jobs entirely. Perhaps it is not yet too late for him to redeem himself, and secure better pay for the musicians, by accepting the compromise plan of the Labor Department conciliator, which has already been accepted by the directors of the orchestra.

If he persists in his present stand, it is evidence of the grossest incompetence and personal incapacity for the position of responsibility which he occupies. Steps should be taken without delay to replace him with a more capable man; one who, even though he should perhaps be equally lacking in a sense of civic responsibility, will at least feel sufficiently his responsibility to the musicians not to throw them unnecessarily out of employment.

The union should also consider that in destroying the Symphony Orchestra, they may also quite conceivably cause a considerable decrease in the demand for the services in other ways of union musicians, on account of the natural resentment which symphony supporters will feel toward the union.

The directors of the orchestra have made every possible effort to reach an agreement which would permit continuance of the orchestra. If the orchestra is destroyed, the musicians' union must shoulder the responsibility.

Two "Triumphs"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are still some people who think that the Administration has accomplished little worthy of admiration or praise.

(1) But, while Germany, Italy and Russia are bankrupt, and Great Britain and France rapidly approaching bankruptcy on account of war expenditures, our Administration, without the United States being at war, and by expenditures having nothing to do with war, has succeeded in making this country nearly bankrupt already, and giving us the certainty that it will reach that condition in a very few years. This is surely something to be admired. No other nation can boast of a similar accomplishment.

(2) And in the diplomatic field, note the dazzling success of Josephus Daniels, our great Ambassador to Mexico. That country leisurely loots many millions of property of United States citizens and treats them with insult and contempt, and the Administration permits this, with only a few weak words of protest now and then, and, actively assists Mexico by purchasing one of its chief products, silver, at far above world prices. It is true that Secretary Hull does not seem to be entirely happy over this success of his associates, but today he counts for little.

These are only two of the many triumphs which Washington is proudly showing an admiring world.

Joining The Allies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Most Americans have a sense of fair play. They realize the issues at stake in the present war. A few so-called Americans are traitors. Others are just plain dumb.

It is not treason to be dumb, but it is dangerous. The heavily fortified city of Oslo was captured by the Germans a few days ago. Its fortifications were impregnable, but a few traitors, hundreds of spies and Nazi agents, and fake orders made it a push-over for the treacherous enemy to take the city and terrorize a whole nation.

There is a great object lesson for us here. Even the majority of newspapers are unable to see the danger we face from within. They ridicule all investigations, and scorn the very idea that we might possibly have enemies within our midst who might do us harm.

They point to the small number of un-American organizations, and want to know in what manner so few can overcome so many. If these people will study the methods used to take possession of strategic points in Norway they will have the answer.

Most pitiful are those who pride themselves on being so smart that they "won't be fooled again by British power-politics," etc. I do not believe that the British are fighting merely because their hearts are bleeding for the ravaged countries of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Ethiopia, Albania, China, Denmark and Norway, nor Rumania, Holland and Sweden who are next on the list, nor for Finland, Latvia, Estonia, Greece and Switzerland. But I know that the British are smart enough to know that when all of these have been despoiled, and the gangster nations have become firmly established all around her, that her turn comes next. That is the reason why Britain and France and Norway are fighting today, because they are so "dumb" that they want to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness instead of being under the Nazi heel.

Walter Lippmann in The Post of April 18 gave a true picture of the issues at stake. "If Hitler can destroy the Allied power, Europe will submit to his domination and other adventurers will participate in the looting which will follow the world-wide anarchy." America would then be surrounded by tyrants bent on her destruction.

We could save ourselves a lot of grief later by joining the Allies now. An expeditionary force would not be necessary, provided we give them the best we can produce of supplies. If we bury our heads in the sand now, we will eventually have to expose them to Herr Hitler's cannons.

If Dictators Win

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Former President Hoover is reported to have said that "World Hate" is the outstanding destroyer of mankind.

Do you think he would include "Righteous Wrath" in the word "Hate?"

Hoover further said: "There can be no peace until liberty is restored to the countries invaded by Russia and Germany." Don't you think he means that the United States, the balance of power of the world, has a moral duty in helping to bring about this peace?

Dewey is reported to have said in a speech in Wisconsin, in their primary campaign, that we should keep out of the affairs of Europe, now and at any time.

If England and France were brought to their knees, do you think Mr. Dewey would feel there would not be great danger to the Monroe Doctrine, and of Germany's hooking up with Mexico, parts of South America and obtaining a foothold in Canada?

And do you think the United States would be strong enough to defend all of this hemisphere, if a combination of the dictator countries would conquer all Europe.

Is This A War For Democracy?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think the letter from your correspondent O. J. W. requires some answer, although most of his statements are so grossly biased as to deceive nobody. Which does O. J. W. prefer: censorship of mails, or neutral shipping sunk at sight, and which does he consider more brutal and barbarous: mine fields laid in restricted areas and with due warning given, or magnetic mines left to float in the open sea, to endanger all shipping, whether neutral or belligerent?

So far from Britain kissing the feet of Stalin, it was her refusal to be a party to Stalin's demands on Estonia, Latvia and Finland which threw Russia into the arms of Germany.

If England no longer buys apples and tobacco, it is because she has to reserve her foreign exchange to buy the munitions of war with which to defend those democratic principles for which she, like America, stands. The life of a nation rests just as much on its economy as on its ideals, and that her own interests are involved in this war is no reproach since her interests are peace and free intercourse among the peoples.

Let it not be forgotten that England is the head of the greatest commonwealth of free peoples the world has even known, so free that some of them, exercising that prerogative of choice, are not even involved in this struggle; the right of free speech and thought is still respected in England, and she has no concentration camps, even for the enemy within her borders. As O. J. W. says, the American people are not so easily fooled, they know the difference between freedom and "preventive custody."

DOROTHY MOULTON MAYER.
Annapolis, Md., April 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reply to the recent anti-British letter of O. J. W., I should like to stress a few points in England's favor. In the first place, England is not fighting this war for imperialistic reasons, but for the preservation of all remaining elements of liberty, justice and human decency. Also Great Britain is no longer an empire, but a commonwealth of nations. If Germany were in such a position do you imagine that she would allow Ireland to remain neutral in this struggle? Not for a minute.

England doesn't pretend to have a blameless historical record, but neither does our own country. That is beside the point. In this war the neutral ships which she detains are almost always released. The officers and crew continue to live. But when a neutral ship is torpedoed by a German submarine or sunk by a stray German mine in the shipping lanes, cargo, ship and crew are often lost. Is their a difference?

This is no petty economic war now being fought in Europe. The outcome of the struggle is vital to all Americans and other liberty loving people, even those now being persecuted in dictator nations. We know that if the Allies win there is some hope of a decent peace and that if the Germans win there is none.

And what is all of this talk about having "learned own lesson from the World War?" Didn't we fight in order to defend our liberty and give international justice a chance? Just because this justice has not been brought about and seems even more greatly threatened at present, can we blame it on our entrance into the last war? We (the democracies) just haven't learned that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. If America had not entered the World War and, as a consequence, German militarism had not been checked, where would we be now?

For years the democracies have allowed Germany, Italy, Japan and Russia to attack weaker nations. Now that a few of them have the courage and intelligence to resist the ruthlessness of these aggressors how can we offer them anything but our loyal support? J. B. K.

The Post Impressionist

In Case Of A Split

Cousin Etha is here for the D. A. R. convention.

Cousin Etha is one of our cousins from the Carthage, Mo., branch of the family; that is to say of my wife's family since my relatives are few and are isolated by space and inclination in Arizona and California.

The Carthage, Mo., branch of my wife's family consists of the Powerses, the Henches and the Wrights. I met them en masse at the wedding, when two of the more elderly ladies sang sadly and sweetly preliminary to the main event. Later I met most of them at a Christmas dinner at the Powers' home, which is large enough to accommodate the whole clan at one serving if the smaller children eat in the conservatory.

Aside from those two occasions I have never met any of the family except the time Toots Powers drove through town on the way to Texas and stopped for lunch, and the time we were in Houston and had dinner with . . . with . . . I've forgotten her name, but she was a very sweet and gracious aunt.

I go into all this because I am a little distressed at trying to decide the exact relationship of Cousin Etha. This relationship might be very important in the way a lot of votes go in the next Presidential race.

The truth of it is that there are so many relatives in my wife's family that it is not possible for me to keep the relationships straight. The lady who is here for the D. A. R. convention isn't really a cousin in the stereotyped sense at all, I suspect.

I dare not cross-examine my wife on this point again. I remember three distinct occasions on which she has explained in detail the relationship of Cousin Etha and two or three others of the clan. I just can't remember things like that. I wouldn't dare ask again.

Well, Cousin Etha is here for the D. A. R. convention, and I have been in a daze of family reports ever since.

In the first place, Cousin Randy and Cousin Marian have got another baby that I thought I had not heard about. When I expressed surprise at the existence of this infant, Cousin Etha and my wife assured me that word had been sent to all the branches of the family in due season.

It seems also that Cousin Randy's assignment to recruiting service in Arkansas has been canceled and he now is in Honolulu supervising the reconditioning of a destroyer or a cruiser or something of the sort. That was interesting to me, too, because I happen to have an odd fondness for Cousin Randy, whom I never have seen. My feeling for him springs from the fact that I think he has just as much trouble keeping the relatives straight as I have.

Cousin Nira and Cousin Firman are selling their big place in Kansas City and are going to live on a farm in Kansas, I learned. Although this is none of my business, I feel that it is a darned shame for Cousin Nira to be moving to a farm; I happen to know, from conversations I have overheard at other family parleys, that she has had more fun cultivating the flowers on the Kansas City place than she ever will have on a farm.

It was after the family reports had been rather thoroughly given, with a consequent lull in the talk, and the radio was reasonably quiet while the reporter in Bucharest was being paged, that I asked a question that might have pretty serious political repercussions.

"What do you think of the Presidential election?" I asked Cousin Etha.

"I don't know," she said. "We are going to have quite a lot of trouble deciding how to vote if the nominations turn out a certain way."

"How's that?" I asked. "You mean if Roosevelt is nominated?"

"Not that, so much," she said. "But we may have relatives connected with each ticket."

"Goodness!" my wife exclaimed. "You mean the leading candidates include some of our relatives? I hadn't realized that."

"Not exactly the leading candidates. But we have relatives closely connected with the leadership of both parties, and it may be kind of difficult to decide how the family will vote."

She reflected a minute, then said a little unhappily:

"I wouldn't be surprised to see a split."

"Is it a family secret, who the relatives are?" I asked. "Are there any skeletons . . ."

"Oh, no," Cousin Etha reassured me. "Cousin George Hench is a cousin of Secretary Ickes."

"But Cousin Ickes isn't running for President," I said.

"You can't tell what Cousin Ickes will do, and anyway he is close to the Democratic leadership," Cousin Etha said.

She's right about that.

"What about the relationship on the Republican side?" my wife wanted to know.

"Dewey," said Cousin Etha.

"You mean Tom Dewey?" I asked, stupidly.

"Yes. You know the Deweys are part of the family."

Then I remembered. We're related to Admiral Dewey, through my wife's family. Some time we're going over to the Cathedral and look at his tomb. I remember.

"How are you going to vote?" Cousin Etha asked, innocently probably, but I fancied I detected a determination to find out whether I had really become one of the family, or just an in-law.

"I won't have to decide," I said, a little weakly. "I don't have a vote, being a resident of the District."

"Oh, that's right," she said. "You'll never know how you would have voted, would you?"

"No," I said. "But I'll bet I'd have voted the way the family voted."

"But if there was a split?"

"I'd have voted the way you would, Cousin Etha."

And Cousin Etha really beamed at me. I'm Cousin Frank now, for sure.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Three Non-Belligerents

THE ALLIES and the Nazis are in contact by land, sea and air in a theater of war which extends from Narvik in northern Norway to the point where the Franco-German frontier touches Switzerland. But their main forces are not engaged; the fighting is essentially a matter of raids and skirmishes in which neither side has been able or willing to risk a decisive battle. As yet the Norwegian campaign is in relation to the whole war no more than a minor operation involving such small forces that neither side can conceivably win the war in Norway. The operation can become decisive only in so far as it leads somehow to the opening up of a battlefield on which the main forces can fight.

Until a greater battlefield is opened up to the armies and to the air forces, the true measure of success for either side is not the number of towns captured or even the number of ships sunk; it is how the course of the fighting affects the judgment of the rulers of the three large non-belligerent states—Italy, Russia and Japan. The grand object of Hitler is to entice Mussolini, Stalin and the Japanese government to join him in a concerted assault on the Franco-British empires. He can succeed only if he can convince them that he is able to deliver a knockout blow. The grand object of the Allies is to parry this blow and thus to prevent Italy, Russia and Japan from joining Hitler, and then eventually to counterattack with such force that the others must come partly or wholly into the Allied coalition.

The three non-belligerents will act in accordance with their opinion of which side is likely to win the war. They may be mistaken in their estimates. But we may take it as certain that what they do will be determined not by what they say, nor by their sympathies, but by what they believe the outcome will be. For all three of them are large states but weak states, and their policies are bound to reflect their fears. They must be with Hitler if he is going to win, and they do not dare be with him if he is going to lose. Until they think they know, they cannot act. If any one of them, say Italy, does act, it will be because that country's rulers have been convinced or bamboozled into thinking that they can foresee clearly the result of the war.

THE WEAKNESS of Italy's position is manifest and is freely recognized by all clear-headed Italians. Italy has no coal and no oil and no steel, and only an insignificant part of Italy's requirements could be supplied overland from Germany; the Italian peninsula is for all practical purposes an island and, therefore, absolutely vulnerable to a blockade. The Italian Empire consists of Abyssinia, which can be cut off at Suez; of Libya, which lies between the French armies in Tunis and the British armies in Egypt. As a belligerent Italy would be fighting in the Mediterranean against France, Britain, and Turkey. For Italy to enter the war before Hitler has struck a really deadly blow at the Allies would, therefore, appear to be suicidal madness, and that is exactly what most Italians think it would be.

On the other hand, if Hitler is going to win the war, then it is no less dangerous for Italy to stay out of the war. A victorious Nazi Germany would not fail to resent fiercely the fact that for the second time Italy had not fulfilled her pledges; the Italians hold the Tyrol which is a very German land; they hold Trieste which is the natural outlet of central Europe to the Mediterranean; the Italians have interests in Albania, Yugoslavia, Hungary, and Rumania which are directly in the path of the German imperialist expansion.

A Nazi victory, obtained without Italian help, would be supremely dangerous for Italy. Therefore, Italy's only chance to save anything from this desperate situation is to join the Germans if they are winning, to join them before it is too late to contribute anything important to the Nazi victory, yet not too soon to be fatally hurt by the Allies.

No wonder Mussolini insists upon being counted as vehemently pro-German while he seeks to decide what is the exact moment when he can and must act the way he talks. His real danger is that the one side or the other, or both, may tire of his vacillation between unfulfilled threats and unfilled promises, and push him overboard.

RUSSIAN POLICY is no less clearly dictated by a desire to estimate correctly the chances of Hitler's victory. For Stalin is animated not by the Communist ideology, but by fear of the German army. Every move he has made reflects this fear. Russia is large but very weak, and a victorious Nazi Germany would certainly carry out the avowed program of Hitler in "Mein Kampf" which is, among other things, to make most of European Russia a colony in which the Germans are the ruling race and the Russians are a subject people.

Stalin did not join the Franco-British alliance because he believed, correctly enough, that Russia would receive the brunt of the attack, and because he feared, not without some justification, that the western powers might be tempted to let the war become an anti-Communist crusade. He made his agreement with Germany in order to avoid having to fight Germany, and out of the partnership he got at no cost at all the best strategic frontier which it is possible for Russia to have. Against a victorious Germany no frontier would be good enough for the Russians; but the present frontier is the best there is.

THE FINNISH WAR was also the product of Stalin's fear of Germany. Nobody believed the Russians when they said that they were "menaced" by Finland. That was a hypocritical lie. Stalin did not mean Finland. He meant Germany, though it was not expedient to say so. What he has taken from Finland is what the Russians require to defend themselves in the north against a German attack. The same motive inspires their claim against Rumania for Bessarabia. This province dominates the mouth of the Danube and it contains the only feasible land route from Russia to the Mediterranean. The Russian interest in Bessarabia is fundamentally the Russian interest in keeping Germany out of the Black Sea and in keeping open Russia's access to the Mediterranean.

Finland is the key to Russo-German relations in the north; Poland is the key in the middle; Bessarabia is the key in the south. This has been recognized for a hundred and fifty years, and in the Napoleonic wars as in the wars of our era Russia's conflict with Germany has turned on Finland, Poland, and Bessarabia. Russia won them all in the Napoleonic war, partly by diplomacy and partly by conquest. Russia lost them when she was knocked out by the other war in 1917. She has regained all but

"Animated not by the Communist ideology, but by fear of the German army."

Bessarabia by diplomacy and by conquest, and so Bessarabia is still an open question.

These Russian gains are, however, precarious. They cannot be held if Hitler is victorious. They cannot surely be held if Hitler falls and Germany becomes once more a normal European state. The hesitations of Stalin arise out of this delicate balance of interest. He cannot afford Hitler's victory. But Stalin must be with Hitler if Hitler wins. Stalin cannot afford a complete western victory. But he must not be at war with the Allies if the Allies win. So, like Mussolini, he is watching the war with profound anxiety.

THE JAPANESE also are in a position where they must pick the winner. They are in trouble in China. If the Allies win in Europe, a British fleet will return to the Far East, and Japan will be compelled to listen to reason about the Chinese affair. If, on the other hand, the British are defeated in Europe, then Japan will establish a very great empire in Asia and the Pacific. She will conquer China by seizing the Netherlands Indies; with these islands in her possession it will no longer be the United States which can threaten Japan with an embargo on oil. It will be Japan which will threaten the United States with an embargo on rubber and tin, and with measures not so very short of war in the Philippines about which, to put it bluntly, we alone should not be strong enough to do anything much.

Moreover, since an Allied defeat in Europe will mean that all hell will break loose on the European and African side of the Atlantic, not to speak of revolutionary coups in the Norwegian style in Latin America, the United States will have to bring its Navy back to the region of the Panama Canal so that this one-ocean Navy may be able to act defensively in either ocean. We shall have nothing further to say about Asia or about the islands of the Pacific, and we shall not be too comfortable about Alaska.

The Japanese, therefore, have a great stake in the Allied defeat. But they cannot afford to be wrong in their judgment as to whether the Allies are going to be defeated. They, too, need to be with the ultimate winners. Yet unlike Italy, which cannot really afford to act until the last phase of the war is in sight, the Japanese could afford to act if they were sure that Hitler was doing enough damage to keep the British occupied in Europe for several years. The conquest of Holland and Belgium might be regarded in Tokio as sufficient damage. That is why the position in the Far East is, in spite of all assurances, so very critical.

ON WHAT ROME, Moscow, and Tokio think are the results of the fighting from Narvik to Switzerland their policies will depend. The policies of Italy, Russia, and Japan will determine whether the struggle can be localized in Northwestern Europe and decided there or whether it is to become, in effect, world-wide.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The Miami Blues

G. A. WORLEY, the State attorney of Dade County, Fla., which includes the two Miamis, has just celebrated crime must go week with considerable eclat and an official whitewash of the Bartenders and Waiters' Union racket operated by Danny Coughlin, a brother-in-law of Al Capone and captain of the household guard of the old monarch of the brothels.

Mr. A. Berlin, a character man whose role is that of tough guy and who made his reputation by slugging a Boy Scout, in recognition of which feat of fearless citizenship he was presented at court and fined $25, is president of the racket. Capone's captain of the guard is the business agent, and the pair of them, Coughlin and Berlin, operate under a warrant or charter issued in the sacred name of labor with a capital L by the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Berlin, incidentally, is proud of his acquaintance with the murderous Mr. Lepke Buchhalter, of New York.

CRIME MUST GO week in the Miamis is an annual celebration corresponding to the Mardi Gras in New Orleans; the cotton carnival, in Memphis, and various watermelon, apple, cherry, strawberry and spinach festivals. It is believed to be pagan in origin. The politicians, brothel-keepers, managers and brokers of prostitutes and racketeers of various specialties rejoice and give thanks to the devil for the bounties of the season. In the Miamis, at this time of year, the criminal scum have reaped their harvest, and the term crime must go, as applied to the celebration, which usually takes the form of a searching probe or fearless investigation, attended by great publicity, means that the criminal scum really must be moving on to other fields. It does not mean that crime must be abolished.

Mr. Worley began the carnival about two weeks ago, touched off by the disclosure in these dispatches of the fact, notorious in the Miamis, that Coughlin and Berlin were shaking down waiters and bartenders, who are the most numerous single employe group in Dade County, for $25 each, an initiation fee, or work-license, plus $2 per month per head, plus various assessments decided on by the racket. The union formerly charged only $12 for initiation, but this was boosted to $25 this year. Inasmuch as most of the victims are floaters or snowbirds they drop out of the local when the season ends with crime must go week and go delinquent until the next season. Then they must either pay back dues and assessments or rejoin. It is about an even thing as to expense to the victim.

MR. WORLEY'S investigation showed that Mr. Coughlin was indeed the union business agent and captain of the guard at the castle of the champion of all brothel-keepers. It showed that Mr. Frank Nitti, also of Chicago, who is outranked only by Capone in American crime, is engaged in the wholesale beverage business in the Miamis. It failed to show that membership in the union was voluntary or that the funds are devoted to the interest of those who are compelled to contribute.

Mr. Worley could have started his investigation on his own initiative at the height of the season, but that would have violated a venerable local tradition which holds that the crime-must-go-ceremonies shall be prompted by some destructive critic from the outside, who is then on his way elsewhere, and that the searching probe or fearless investigation shall result in an indignant vindication of the fair name of Dade County.

Mr. Worley examined 50 witnesses and failed to find substantiation of the fact that waiters and bartenders controlled and exploited by the racket are engaged in pushing the beverages sold by Mr. Nitti. He failed to discover evidence that waiters and bartenders are compelled to kick back part of their pay to the racket for preferred jobs or any jobs at all. In short he found nothing wrong.

But Mr. Worley need not consider himself a failure at his mission. Any public official so naive as to believe that defenseless individuals would go on record against a member of the household of the vilest and most bloodthirsty criminal in American history, with no more protection than Mr. Worley can provide, is an ideal personage for the king of crime must go carnival.

If Mr. Worley can bring in nothing worse than a clean bill for this racket in the face of its known connections with the noble houses of Capone and Nitti, neither he nor anyone else in the Miamis can blame the witnesses for forgetting their grievances on the witness stand.

A Significant Vote

Toward Constitutionalism

THIS COLUMN IS going to be about a most important event this week in Washington, the Capital of the United States—an event having to do with the rights of the citizen as against the power of government, and having to do with protection of the citizen's rights by courts, judicial bodies. But I begin by quoting a recent decision of a court in a distant country, Germany:

"Today's constitution is dominated by the principle of political leadership. The courts have, therefore, no right to decide upon the legal validity of political acts of the administration."

That is, the authoritarian conception of government, common to German Nazism and Russian Communism, whatever the government does, is right and must not be restrained by the courts. Against the acts of government, the citizen can have no protection by courts or constitution.

That is Germany. Now turn to Washington, to what was done by the House of Representatives last Thursday. I say what was "done;" more accurately it should be, what was "undone." For what the House did was a long step away from a tendency toward the authoritarian type of government, which has grown up in Washington. The step the House took was back toward constitutional government, toward the American tradition, toward protection of the rights of the citizen against the power of government.

The House, by an immense majority, passed the Walter-Logan Bill. This bill, in brief, checks the power of the administrative agencies of the Government, such as the Labor Board, Triple-A, and scores of others. The bill provides that whenever these agencies make a regulation or issue an order, any citizen affected by it shall have the right to appeal to a judicial body. The Walter-Logan Bill goes back to an ideal long venerated in America, that no agent of Government may lay hands upon a citizen's person or property, or take action contrary to the citizen's interest, without the citizen having an opportunity to appeal to a judicial body, a disinterested court, before which the citizen and the Government are equals.

TO STATE, in brief space, what the Walter-Logan Bill does, is difficult. Its language is necessarily legal and technical. Difficulty lies in the very fact that the bill goes to the heart of principles of government which we have so long taken for granted, like the air we breathe, that we have forgotten the nature of them.

President Roosevelt candidly said to a press conference that he had not read the bill but that he opposed it. That adverse judgment no doubt had been taken by him from some subordinates, whose power would be restrained by the bill. This incident illustrates what the Government of the United States today largely is, a large body of officials for whom the President is obliged to act merely as symbol and spokesman, because he cannot possibly be familiar with all the matters on which he must take an official position. This condition is a reason for the Walter-Logan Bill. It was put in words by the very able Democratic Congressman Hatton W. Sumners, of Texas.

"Operating the machinery of this Government [are] nearly a million people. Of that million . . . there is only one who has been elected by the people, and that is the President . . . The President cannot know who these million people are. He cannot know what they are doing with the governmental powers that are entrusted to them . . . They make the rules, which have the force of law; they construe the rules; they enforce the rules. When one of these people goes to an ordinary private citizen, he goes to him with all the powers that a king ever had. This private citizen may be 2,000 miles from Washington. He has no power to resist, practically speaking, the mandate of an agent of these bureaus . . . We have got to make it possible for a citizen to resort to the only place under Anglo-Saxon systems of government that an aggrieved citizen can come to, and that is the courts."

What Congressman Sumners said was said before by another Democrat of the same intellectual type, Woodrow Wilson: "It is one of the essentials of constitutional government that the individual should be provided with some tribunal to which he could resort with the confident expectation that he should find justice there . . . justice against the Government itself."

THE MAJORITY for the bill—that is, against the New Deal—was 279 to 97, practically 3 to 1. That is a sign of current political sentiment in the broadest sense. It is much more than the 2 to 1, which would be necessary to pass the bill over the President's veto, if it should come to that. The majority of 3 to 1, and the fact that much more than half the Democrats voted for it, is an index of the standing of the New Deal in Congress and in the Democratic Party.

It is an index also of popular feeling. For every member of the House (except such few as may retire voluntarily) comes up this year for renomination and reelection. Those Congressmen know the pulse of the people—they must, in order to survive. Their willingness to vote a far-reaching check to the New Deal is an expression of their judgment and conscience, of course, but also an expression of their observation of the mood of the voters. This 3-to-1 vote in the House on the Walter-Logan Bill is a rather more authentic index of this political year than some of the informal polls which point a different way.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Whig's White Knight

IT WAS Mr. Pitt who shouted in Parliament, "The Americans are the sons, not the bastards, of England." It was Mr. Pitt, one-time British Prime Minister, who said boldly, "I rejoice that America has resisted." The same Mr. Pitt called John Wilkes's "North Briton" a detestable publication and its author a blasphemer, but stoutly defended Wilkes's right of free speech. That was all a long time ago—close to nine-score years ago. "J. C. Long's Mr. Pitt and America's Birthright" (Stokes, $3.50) makes him a hero in contemporary terms.

"Pitt had risen to power in a nation which had lost confidence in itself and had begun to imitate the totalitarian powers," Mr. Long says, "by tolerating a series of chief ministers who had ignored democratic principles . . . Not until Pitt called upon the genius of the people as a whole had England risen to a towering resurgence above the Bourbon States."

It was a corrupt age, and by eighteenth-century standards Pitt was not corrupt. But he loved power, and would scheme vengefully for it. He was a born actor, and induced Garrick to train him in the actor's art. He was not above exaggerating his goutiness to win the sympathy of an audience. He was through most of his life a commoner, with an instinctive sense of the British middle class as the true ruler of England that gives Mr. Long a right to paint him as a pioneer of democracy.

But it was more instinct than principle with him; and it never led him into political extravagances. He could hit hard, but his was not the crusader's nature. Compared to Walpole, and others of his adversaries, he was a white knight of purity, but Mr. Long is over-generous when he says that he "never failed at any cost in a choice between integrity and advantage." After all, he was a successful eighteenth-century politician.

PITT WAS always at his best in a rough-and-tumble parliamentary fight. His prepared speeches are monuments of pompous, dull, Roman oratory. But when, after he had urged repeal of the Stamp Act, and defended the American resentment against it, and Grenville accused him of preaching insurrection, the tall, hawklike Pitt rose to his heights—and that an English minister could so speak in 1766 is a living part of that tradition which makes American hearts beat with English hearts today:

"I have been charged with giving birth to sedition in America," he said. "They have spoken their sentiments with freedom against this unhappy act, and that freedom has become their crime. Sorry I am to hear the liberty of speech in this House imputed as a crime. But the imputation shall not discourage me. It is a liberty I mean to exercise. No gentleman ought to be afraid to exercise it. It is a liberty by which the gentleman who calumniates it might have profited. He ought to have desisted from his project. The gentleman tells us America is obstinate; America is almost in open rebellion.

"I rejoice that America has resisted. Three millions of people so dead to all the feelings of liberty, as voluntarily to submit to be slaves, would have been fit instruments to make slaves of the rest."

If somewhere in Germany there were a forum at which a man could make such a speech about the slaves of Germany today, and remain alive and in public life, we might be readier to listen to the rest of the German argument. There is not. Say what one may of Tory control of English public life, there is still the tradition of British freedom which permitted Pitt, even in George III's and Lord North's England to shout those memorable words. Mr. Long does well to recall them.

Reply To Mr. Lindley

By O. R. McGuire

Chairman, Special Committee on Administrative Law American Bar Association.

About The Walter-Logan Bill

DECLARING that editorial writers attempting to explain the Walter-Logan administrative law bill "are no further off of the track than some of the lawyers' associations which have indorsed the bill" and that he was "overcome with awe of my editorial-writing and columnar friends," Mr. Ernest K. Lindley stated in an article in the April 19, 1940, issue of The Washington Post that the bill had been studied by many persons qualified to judge its effects and that the "expert verdict against it is too impressive to be ignored."

Mr. Lindley very clearly evidences his bias in favor of the position taken by 97 members of the House of Representatives who voted on April 18, 1940, against the bill rather than in favor of the position taken by 282 members who voted in favor of it. Mr. Lindley then listed the membership of two committees of the City Bar Association of the City of New York and the National Lawyers Guild as disapproving the bill.

Mr. Lindley failed to mention—and perhaps he did not know—that the bill had been studied and approved by the following organizations: The National Grange, an organization of farmers; the American Federation of Labor, the greatest labor organization in America; the National Publishers Association, an organization of magazine publishers; the National Association of Mail Users, Inc., an organization whose members are large users of the mail; the general counsel of the National Retail Druggists Association, an organization which must deal with the Department of Agriculture's Pure Food and Drug Administration, the Federal Trade Commission, and the Postoffice Department; the National Manufacturers Association, composed of the principal manufacturers in the United States furnishing employment to millions; the Master Plumbers Association, composed of many thousand master plumbers who perform work on Government buildings; the National Electrical Contractors Association, an organization whose members install electric wiring and fixtures in many Government structures; the Ohio, California, New York State and St. Louis Chambers of Commerce; the Alabama Cotton Manufacturers Association; the Manhattan Civic Club, a group of business and professional men in New York City; the New York Board of Trade, and numerous other business organizations.

Also, Mr. Lindley fails to refer to the fact that this bill likewise has been studied and approved by the American Bar Association, the National Association of Women Lawyers, and by the following State and city bar associations: California, Colorado, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maryland, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Boston, Chicago (in principle), Cleveland, Dallas, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Buffalo or Erie County, and many other county bar associations in various sections of the United States.

NEITHER DOES Mr. Lindley refer to the fact that the bill has been indorsed and is being supported by the American Coalition of Patriotic Societies, representing organizations of more than one million members; the Citizens Emergency Council, which is opposed to un-Americanism in all of its forms; and by the Sentinels, an organization of women in Salt Lake City, Utah.

These organizations, through their appropriate committees, studied the unanimous Senate Judiciary Committee report and the almost unanimous House Judiciary Committee report approving the Walter-Logan Bill, and they either studied or had available to them the reports for some six or seven years that the American Bar Association's special committee on administrative law has been in existence. Mr. Lindley is as far wrong in his suggestion that the supporters of the Walter-Logan Bill do not understand its terms as he is reported to have been not so long ago with respect to a certain political matter.

Mr. Lindley mentions by name certain members of the two committees of the City Bar of New York who have disapproved of the bill, but he fails to mention by name any of the members of the National Lawyers Guild which likewise disapproved the bill, and he fails to mention that not so long ago Judge Pecora and some other members of the National Lawyers Guild threatened to resign because they objected to communistic influence in that organization.

Among the men and women who have either assisted in writing the Walter-Logan administrative law bill or have vigorously supported it, we find such undoubted legal scholars and unquestionable Americans as Roscoe Pound, for more than a quarter of a century the dean of the Harvard University Law School; Walter F. Dodd, formerly professor of constitutional law at Yale University Law School and an adviser to Governors of States in reorganization of their governmental machinery; William Green and Joseph A. Padway, president and general counsel, respectively, of the American Federation of Labor, who have fought the battles of labor on a thousand fronts; Adele I. Springer, who almost single-handed brought about the enactment of safety-at-sea legislation and who is chairman of the committee on administrative law of the National Association of Women Lawyers; Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois, and both an administrator and businessman of high attainments, and James R. Garfield, former commissioner of corporations and father of the present Federal Trade Commission as well as a later Secretary of the Interior.

I DO NOT have available space to list even a fraction of the eminent men and women, Democrats and Republicans, conservatives and liberals, from every State in the Union and from every center of population, who either contributed their thoughts and suggestion in connection with the Walter-Logan Bill or who are today vigorously supporting it.

Of course, there may properly be honest differences of opinion with respect to the objectives of the Walter-Logan Bill, but as Congressman Francis E. Walter pointed out in a broadcast on April 18, 1940, over a Nation-wide hook-up of the Columbia Broadcasting System, there were differences of opinion as to the practicability and feasibility of the Constitution of the United States in 1787 when it was being written in Philadelphia. That difference continued until after it was ratified and placed in operation in 1789. Both Communists and Fascists within our gates openly profess to doubt the Constitution today while proclaiming its protection every time they come into conflict with the law. Truly is it said that "No man who ever felt the halter draw had a good opinion of the law!"

PERHAPS the Walter-Logan Bill is not perfect; none of its supporters has so claimed. But it is a singular fact that the opponents have failed to make any constructive suggestion for its improvement during the some seven years the plan was under study nor did they make such suggestions to the Senate and House Judiciary Committees. The opponents objected to the bill in its entirety and suggested nothing as a substitute.

Mr. Lindley expresses it as his apparent opinion that the Walter-Logan Bill would make "hash of the machinery of government." He fails to inform his readers that practically all features of the said bill are now in operation in a few of the Federal administrative agencies and that most of such features have long been in operation in a number of State governments, particularly with respect to the administration of statutes providing for fair labor standards.

The Walter-Logan Bill is a just and fair bill. If enacted into law, it will greatly simplify and expedite the conduct of the public business. It will reduce expense. It will insure a rule of law and not entirely of men. It will bring uniformity as to the general procedure of issuing regulations, their judicial review, and the hearing of controversies between Government officials and individuals. It is a truly liberal bill. It is fantastic to believe otherwise in view of the impressive record of support behind the bill.

Red Cross Needles Speed Up As War Rages on New Front

Keeping up with the war is even more difficult for the Red Cross than it is for the diplomats.

A war to counteract the war is being fought in Washington by more than 2,000 District volunters, many of whom look to warring Europe as their homeland, and as it spreads the task grows more difficult.

Mrs. J. W. Anderson, Flora Lyon, Mrs. Harold Rayner, Mrs. Albert Svihra
Working on surgical dressings

All over the city—in churches, in clubrooms and in private homes—the 60 volunteer wartime units of the District Red Cross are busy making surgical dressings, knitting garments for refugees and preparing first-aid supplies.

Since the outbreak of the war, more than 8,000 garments and 88,000 surgical dressings have been made by Washington women, but with Norway's new needs and the current spring offensive, the demand is far exceeding the supply of workers.

Quotas have been increased with new invasion and additional quotas are expected at almost any time. The local Red Cross headquarters, at 1703 E street northwest, is now working overtime, with pleas for 52,500 surgical dressings alone still unfilled.

The work of preparing these supplies all is done by Washington volunteers, mostly women's and church groups, with the materials furnished by the American Red Cross. Instructors are sent to each group from District headquarters to insure uniformity and efficiency.

Heading these operations are five volunteer, full-time chairmen: Mrs. J. H. Fishback, in charge of garment production; Mrs. James T. Nicholson, in charge of knitting (assisted by a committee of 20); Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper, in charge of war relief surgical dressings; Grace Wright, in charge of dressings for hospitals, and Mrs. Charles Glover, jr., in charge of instruction.

Needed most badly just now are volunteers for knitting and sewing, according to Mrs. M. B. Tice, vice chairman of the District group. "We have calls for more than 10,000 garments, and expect more appeals at any time," she said yesterday.

War emergency materials furnished by the local organization vary widely. A partial list includes 18 types of special surgical dressings, sweaters, socks, baby layettes containing 29 items, blouses, convalescent robes, hospital bed shirts, operating gowns, mufflers, mittens and caps.

As the German Red Cross organization has not asked for assistance as yet, these goods have been sent largely to Poland, Finland, France and England. Aid has already been offered to Norway, but officials there have not yet cabled the extent of their needs.

Behind a good share of this nonpartisan, humanitarian endeavor are little groups of Washington churchwomen, Army and Navy wives, and altruistic women from diplomatic, Finnish, French, British, Jewish and Polish circles in the District.

Right Materials, Clothing Needed for Play

Parents Should Prepare Child for Outdoor Season Now Approaching

By Martha Ellyn,

ALL MOTHERS realize the importance of a well-balanced diet for their children. It is just as important to maintain a balance of play activities that will stimulate physical development. Children need materials that encourage creative activity and manipulative skill. Imaginative play and group play are equally essential parts of an all-around play program, and especially so now that warm weather and the time for children to play out of doors in the sunshine is here.

Martha Ellyn

A play room that encourages only one kind of play is just as unbalanced as a diet including the best of steak and yet does not offer vegetables, fruits, cereals, greens and milk. It is equally important for play materials to keep pace with the child's developing capabilities.

Types of Play

Play may be divided into the following types:

ACTIVE PLAY—Stimulates physical development and helps perfect coordination between the eye, ear and muscles. Wheel toys, games and gym equipment and hobby kits are typical of this type of play.

CREATIVE PLAY—Develops manipulative skill, stimulates initiative and develops powers of observation and judgment. Construction toys, drawing equipment and hobby kits are typical of this type of play.

DRAMATIC PLAY—Encourages imaginative development and helps the child learn to adjust himself to grown-up living. Imitation of adult housekeeping and business activities is popular in this phase of play development. Little stoves, miniature train systems and cowboy costumes are typical aids.

SOCIAL PLAY—Educates children to get along with one another. Games in which several children take part are essential aids to social play because they teach the fundamentals of good sportsmanship as well as concentration and quick, accurate thinking.

AGE SUITABILITY—Classification of toys by age groups is a vitally important contribution to the fun value and educational usefulness of modern toys. Children need playthings that stimulate—but do not strain—their capabilities.

Clothing Important

Correct clothing for play is another important thing for children. In a recent interview with Miss Clarice Scott, clothing specialist, Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, she told of the points that should be considered in a child's play togs. Always they should have enough fullness across the back and shoulders, either gathers or pleats, so that the clothing will be comfortable. The neckline should be large enough that it will not draw and "choke." She says that children outgrow their necklines readily, so that when buying clothing for them the size of the neckline should be watched. A comfortable armhole giving plenty of room and sleeves that will not catch the forearm are also essential for children.

For play clothes washable materials should be used. Attention should be given to buying soft materials. The materials should be color-fast and reasonably durable. For girls it is well to buy dresses or make them with wide hems so that they may be let down. Self-help clothing, such as costumes that fasten down the front, are recommended for children, with buttons neither too large or too small for small fingers to manage.

The children in the picture below are not wood nymphs, but young Americans all ready to keep in step with Spring. Their play clothes are made along tailored lines. Mary Jane is wearing a sanforized flowered pique ensemble consisting of sun suit, coat and sunbonnet, and 6-year-old Junior wears striped sanforized denim slacks with an "in-or-outer" shirt. No matter how many times their play togs go to the laundry tub, the shrinkage label attached promises a permanent fit for them

Your Figure, Madame

New Long Jacket Style Calls for Slim Hips, Girls!

WHEN ANYTHING as nifty as the new long jacket suit appears on the fashion horizon, look out! A style like that can go on for years. In the first place, it is different; secondly, it is tantalizingly exclusive. Whether the designers did it intentionally or not, the fact remains that only the girls with slim hips can wear this high style with the proper dash.

You aren't going to let a little thing like a hip problem keep you from wearing the latest style, are you? Particularly if—as seems likely—this hip-hugging fashion holds over a for a year or so. Of course not. Well, what are we waiting for?

Those little pincushions of fat on the sides of the hips give the figure a bowed effect that looks terrible but is easily corrected. If that's all that is worrying you, it can be fixed in a couple of weeks. All you have to do is roll, like this:

POSITION: Lie on the oor on the left side with the right hand out on the floor in front of the chest for leverage. Have the legs extended straight down and keep them together. For freedom of motion, hold head and heels slightly off the floor.

Bicycle Technique Slim

MOVEMENT: Shove with the right hand and roll clear over on the other side until you come to a stop with the left hand out in front on the floor chest-level for a brake. Back to the right side, and then to the left.

While lying on the floor, you can do your figure another good turn by resting on the side in the same starting position as given for rolling, except that the head can be on the floor, and doing the old bicycle exercise sideways. Be sure that your weight is brought to bear on the pincushion of fat, and pedal away. Bring alternate knees high up toward chest as the other leg shoots downward. Count 50, and lie on the other side to pedal for 50 more counts.

Hips that jut out in back can be smoothed and slimmed with this rolling technique:

With a slim, trim figure and a superb posture, Joan Blondell, shown below, can wear the most exacting styles with dash POSITION: Lie back on the floor with the knees flexed and the ankles crossed. Reach down and grasp the ankles with the hands.

MOVEMFNT: Roll from side to side. As you roll, pressure is brought to bear on the lower part of the back and the upper part of the hipline. As in the first rolling exercise, hold head slightly off floor.

For That Middle-Age Spread

Here is one more—and it is one of the best for correcting the middle-age hip-spread:

So Here's Exercise That Will Put Your Figure in Style

POSITION: Assume a semi-sitting position on the floor, legs straight down and together. Lean backward with hands on the floor at the sides and back.

MOVEMENT: Roll over on the side of the left hip and thigh, push with the left hand, and roll over on the right hip and thigh. You can keep this up as long as you please—and you will be very pleased with the quick results.

With that compact set of hip-slimmers, there is no reason why you should lose any time acquiring the svelte figure that makes an exacting style look all the smarter.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Weakling Wins Girl's Pity, Then Her Love; After She 'Builds Her Life Around Him,' He Jilts Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Four years ago, when I was 21, I started going with a young man who first aroused my pity and finally won my love. Because I felt we should become better acquainted before marrying, I refused his proposals time and again, although I lent him money occasionally—loans which I could ill afford to make, as I support my mother on my rather small income.

Then one night he contracted a drunken marriage with a girl he scarcely knew. They never lived together and shortly afterward the girl married again, bigamously (as she never bothered to get a divorce), and had two children. After four years, an annulment is now being sought. During these years I have talked this man out of suicide a hundred times, promising to stand by him, whatever happened.

Finally, however, his jealousy, infidelity and lies drove me to accept a position 1,500 miles away, which I procured through the good offices of a devoted friend. The morning I left for the new job he was so hateful (in the presence of my mother) that I couldn't eat. But once I had arrived at my destination, love letters from him began to pour in at the rate of three a day, and after some weeks, he came to see me. All this so thoroughly convinced me that he had repented and reformed that I resigned my job and came back here in less than a year, in order to be near him and help him keep up the good work.

But his interest is dwindling, particularly since I have stopped lending him money. This is his last year in a most expensive post-graduate course of study at a local school, and he is too busy and worried to be bothered with me,—when just a year ago he was crying, actually, as he begged me for dates. Now he says calmly, "Why don't you get out and meet people?" If I grow hysterical at his neglect,—which I sometimes do,—he curtly tells me to "stop carrying on." Also, he says "we differ on too many points to risk mariage.' And he says "it's just too bad" that I believed all he said in his love letters to me.

I'm almost out of my mind. I haven't the money to entertain or make friends. I never meet anyone. I go to art school one night a week (the only recreation I can afford) and my church has no young people's group . . . Don't tell me to stop feeling sorry for myself. All I can think of is the wasted years I spent on him, and the way he has changed my life and character. I'm so morbidly lonely I can't think of anything else.

None of my friends like him and have always advised me to stop seeing him. That's easy for them to say, with their full and happy lives, but my whole existence has centered around him for so long that I don't know how to go on without him. . . . What does a girl do with the remnants of a wasted life, when she is as limited in finances and social opportunities as I am? (My mother can't possibly help. I hide my feelings from her as much as I can. She is rather elderly, and while she is very sweet, she just isn't any help). Please advise me.

OLD MAID.

None So Blind as Those Who Will Not See

DEAR OLD MAID: You are behaving as stupidly as the proverbial horse that fights to get back into a burning barn. It has been said, "There are none so blind as those who will not see." Can't you see that this man has turned in a rotter's performance from the beginning of your association until now? And that life will be "hell on earth" for any conventionally-minded woman who throws in her lot with his? And that your present torture is the first-installment penalty you are required to pay for giving him "house room" in your scheme of things?

If you can't look these things straight in the eye and admit the truth of them, you are almost as white-livered and evasive, in your way, as the man is in his way. And if you cannot show some intelligence and character, some self-respect and courage, in this emotional crisis, there is nothing anyone can do to help you recover your balance.

Remember the famous lines of Robert Burns: "The best laid schemes o' mice and men gang aft a-gley; and leave us naught but grief and pain for promised joy." Well, that's exactly what happened in your case. You are not the first woman to learn from bitter experience that you can't make a hero out of a heel, try as you will. And I would remind you of another saying,—"Anybody may make a mistake; but only a fool won't learn from experience."

You would like to hold this man responsible for your heavy emotional (and considerable financial) investment in him. But the fault, if any, lies with yourself, dear lady. Instead of damning him as a betrayer, you should be damning yourself for a sucker. The polecat aroma of his personality has been evident to everybody in your circle for years, as you concede, and it was to be expected that, in time and under provocation, he would outrage your sensibilities as well. To put the matter another way—you built a house of cards on a foundation of sand, and now you're bawling your head off because it won't stand up. Blaming the materials you used, when you should be acknowledging the absurdity of your expectations.

If these are harsh words, it's because you need them. A slap in the face is the best home remedy for a grown-up's hysteria. And your question, "What is a girl (of 25) to do with the remnants of a wasted life?"—is just so much bellyache. My advice to you is to pull yourself up by the bootstraps out of this mess you let yourself in for,—by wangling another job 1500 miles or so distant from the scene of disillusionment.

If you continue to hang around here, it will be partially for whatever masochistic pleasure you hope to get out of parading your heartbreak under the nose of your erstwhile boy friend. And that would be a most nonproductive exertion, believe me, because the more you rant, the wider berth he'll give you. Once before, while you still held the upper hand in the relationship, you had the resourcefulness to break away, and you can do it again, if you make up your mind to.

You are barely over the threshold into the realm of adult experience. Or, looking at life as an arena, let us say that you have taken it on the chin in your first round with Love, so-called. But if you're the sort of person who's entitled to the trophy known as happiness, you'll be back on your feet before the count of nine, with some mighty useful knowledge in your head that wasn't there before: namely, the knowledge that if you play with a knave you're bound to get gypped, sooner or later, one way or another. Clocks Should Be Selected For Their Decorative Effect, As Well as for Their Accuracy

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

We feel strongly that clerks should be selected as much for their decorative qualities as for their accuracy. So blush, all ye, who have been letting a 69 cent alarm tick away your life, when a clock can be a noble possession that adds beauty though it does let the hours slip by.

The grandfather clock is the most benign and handsome of all clocks . . . have one if you can manage and have a worthy place for it. This type of a clock first appeared in France in the time of Louis IV, so don't confine your thoughts of such a clock to colonial cases. The sunburst clock happen to be our own favorite when there's a formal wall or a mirrored chimney for it; 'tis a grand and dramatic gesture in the right place.

For glamour, a frivolous china clock with cupids or shepherdesses or flowers galore is charming. But the friendly cheer of a banjo clock on the wall is the thing for certain places and people. We shouldn't want a kitchen without a blue and white china plate clock . . . the type that used to be called wag-at-the-wall because the pendulum hung down. But an electric kitchen clock will keep the best time and no nonsense about it.

That reminds us that the modern designers have been busier about clocks than about most anything—at least they seem to have achieved almost a monopoly on the clocks offered at nice average prices . . . all I seem to see are the streamlined models.

Very smart looking clocks they are, too, of blond wood, of mirror, of frosted glass, of plastics, of chromium and brass and many other interesting materials. The only catchis that a lot of people don't have modern houses, so isn't it about time that the manufacturers thought more about clocks for period rooms, clocks with individually and decorative interest. Maybe more homes would then have something beside that ubiquitous 69-center . . . actually there should be a good clock in every room. Now that's something from a person who is against time to begin with.

Incidentally, New England is the biggest clock manufacturer in the world. Pope Silvester II is said to have invented the first clock in 996 A. D.

Spring Changes In Men's Menus

Meals, like folks, often get run down after a long, hard winter. Folks take to spring tonics or exercise. Alert cooks administer tonics to their menus, too. They give meals a new flavor fling—introduce a new sauce here, a new filling there, a new variation of an old dish.

Here's a spring brightener for a casserole dish: Mix a cup each of cooked potatoes (new potatoes, to really be springy), carrots, celery and peas. Add two cups of savory-white sauce into which you have mixed two-thirds cup cheese and a teaspoon each of chopped parsley and chives. Pour the whole mixture into a buttered baking dish—rather shallow—and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. This gives you a dish that has plenty of minerals and vitamins, pleasing taste and color—and it will give your budget a smile.

Shirred Chiffon

Exquisite all-over shirring dresses up the superb simplicity of this new rayon chiffon "lumberjack" dress. Blouse top in "lumberjack" fashion is all-over shirred, finished with plain chiffon notch collar, cuffs and button-front band. Flared skirt is all-over shirred. Brown, grey or navy with contrasting flower on lapel. Misses' sizes. A costume to wear gracefully for every daytime event—and for informal evenings, too!

New Stunts for Bridal Showers

A "WEDDING CAKE" shower! Pretty enough to win oceans of praise for the hostess—and a happy surprise for the bride-to-be, who discovers her "cake" is filled with gifts!

It's no trick to plan delightful showers, birthday or anniversary celebrations when you have these original, clever party ideas—right off the press, with many excellent illustrations.

The lovely wedding cake shower centers around a luncheon. Set your table with big bowls of roses, have a corsage for the guest of honor, a nut-cup place card for each guest. The base of the nut cup is a gilt pasteboard heart. The cup is made by coiling a lace-paper doily, and fastening it with Scotch tape to the card.

For the centerpiece, decorate a hatbox to look like a wedding cake, using a pastry tube and ready-made cake decorations. To each gift tie a long ribbon having at one end a bell-shaped tag with the giver's name. And then tuck the gifts in the "cake" to await the surprise moment when the bride lifts the top "layer."

Or would you rather entertain with a jolly kitchen shower, introducing "Mammy"—who is all mops, brooms, can openers? Or how about a "Ball-and-Chain" shower for the neglected groom-to-be?

And on a birthday, you can have grand fun with a "Suppressed Desires" party. Guests come dressed to present their secret longings—as gun-molls, movie stars, etc.

Dozens of clever parties like these are described in our new 40-page booklet, "Showers, Announcements and Anniversaries." Has original, fun-making ideas for bridal showers, baby showers, wedding anniversaries, birthdays, engagement announcements.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Showers, Announcements and Anniversaries," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Actors Do Like To Eat on Stage If Food Is Good

GAGS ABOUT actors needing to eat have long been standard goods, especially in the past few years when most of them have done their gobbling in Hollywood. But even on Broadway in sturdier days actors enjoyed eating on the stage at times if the grub was real good, and if it came in Act I they might even skip dinner to make room for it.

ALICE HUGHES

I remember that when Lionel Atwell was a Belasco star and not a movie character player, almost every show the master produced for him had a big eating scene—in which Atwell revealed, for such is always theatrically effective. Who will ever forget George Arliss' tremendous munching scene in Galsworthy's "Old English?" There was a one! Even now the cast of "Life With Father," the great comedy hit, eats a big meal on the stage eight times a week. It's a good hearty nineteenth century breakfast in New York—bacon, cereal and all—prepared over a two-burner grill by Eddie Galety, the Empire Theater's property mawster. Howard Lindsay, Dorothy Stickney and their stage sons tuck away a lot in a week.

The Russian Ballet, just closed here, jams Russian restaurants in the theatrical district—there's a fine one up near Carnegie Hall, on Fifty-seventh street. I recall that when Stanislavsky's great Moscow Art Players were here some years back, and played towns with no

Russian beaneries, they insisted on slyly cooking highly scented dishes in their dressing rooms, to the horror of the stage firemen and the disgust of actors who followed them next week, and couldn't shovel the odd odors from backstage. Greatest of all, however, is circus eating, done in what they call the cook-house. Lillian Leitzel taught me a great lesson. Bread is passed down the long tables on high-piled plates. "Never take the top slice," warned the aerial star, "It always has the dust and dirt of the lot on it." Maybe not too polite, but horse sense for everything in life, perhaps.

Mrs. R. A. Long Ellis Guest At Sheldon Cocktail Dinner

The Former Mary McDowell Will Visit Here Several Weeks While Husband Inspects Lumber Camps; Now Lives in Kansas City

By Dudley Harmon

HERE FROM KANSAS CITY, while her husband tours Western lumber camps on business, Mrs. R. A. Long Ellis was guest of honor at a small cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by her mother, Mrs. Luther Sheldon.

The former Miss Mary McDowell, a popular Washington resident until she moved to Kansas City after her marriage, will be here for several weeks. Yesterday she wore a black dress with colored piping at the neck and an orchid pinned to her shoulder. She is most enthusiastic about life in Kansas City.

Capt. Sheldon was on hand yesterday and other members of the family present were Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Swift. The latter is a niece of Mrs. Sheldon, and with her husband is making her home with her grandfather, Theodore W. Noyes. Mr. Swift, a well known singer, recently appeared at the Shoreham Blue Room, where, he says, he "was sandwiched in between a horse and a marionette act." He is dividing his time between the Capital and New York, where he is continuing his studies for the concert stage. His wife is acting as his manager, having before her marriage, helped with the drama and radio page of a local newspaper. Mrs. Swift was also on the stage before she married.

There were plenty of bachelors at yesterday's parties, most of them being from Hockley, across the river, where Bill Sheldon, Capt. Sheldon't son, lives with a dozen others. Edward F. Pritchard, John Ferguson, and William Van Allen were among the Hockleyites who dropped in.

Dr. Enthonen Gives A Cocktail Party

Others present included Mrs. Crosby Boyd, who wore a black and white checked suit, Miss Sylvia Alexander, in a black coat trimmed with striped material; Miss Mary Wilson, who has been working hard for the past few weeks on the Children's Hospital circus benefit now running at Riverside Stadium, and Mr. and Mrs. Berkeley L. Simmons. The party was held at Capt. and Mrs. Sheldon't home on Cleveland avenue.

Though no Dutchman is feeling very cheerful these days, what with Holland having been put under martial law yesterday, Dr. H. E. van Enthoven was the perfect host yesterday at the cocktail party he gave in his hotel. A professor of diplomatic history at the Universities of Amsterdam and Leyden, he is in this country to lecture at leading American institutions, among them Harvard.

Among the guests were several members of the Netherlands legation staff and their wives. Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, wearing a bright red hat with her dark coat, was present.

Also there was Mrs. Marion Warburg, who topped off her black dress with a white sailor. She and the host first became acquainted in Salzburg, where both used to attend the music festivals regularly in other years. Dr. van Enthoven is a composer as well as a professor, and came to Washington especially to hear last week-end's Coolidge festival of chamber music. He will be here until Wednesday and hopes to return early in the summer for another few days before going back to Holland.

Two Others Just Back From Music Festival

Two other guests yesterday had just returned from the music festival now going on at Williamsburg. Arthur Bradley Campbell and his cousin, Miss Marjorie Meuser, motored down on Thursday to spend two days. Yesterday Miss Meuser wore a gray tailored suit with a felt sailor.

Others present yesterday included Mrs. Sol Bloom, Miss Vera Bloom, Mrs. Matthew Hanna, in black with a very smart hat trimmed in silver, and Lieut. Tilghman Bunch.

The couple chose an early hour to be married in order to catch the clipper in Baltimore, but it was grounded because of bad weather and they left for New York instead.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Ayvazouglou. She wore a two-piece beige wool suit and a navy blue straw hat coachman style. Her corsage was of forget-me-nots and lilies of the valley.

Miss Tamara Dmitrieff, in a navy blue ensemble with a cluster of gardenias and roses, served as matron of honor. Dr. Robert Barton, of Boston, served as best man for his brother.

Miss Virginia Elizabeth Koons Is Married to John Jacobsen

Palms and White Snapdragons Deck Ballroom of Washington Club For Ceremony; Rev. J. S. Spence Officiates

Palms and snapdragons decked the ballroom of the Washington Club for the marriage of Miss Virginia Elizabeth Koons and John Sippel Jacobsen, which took place yesterday at 4 o'clock, the Rev. John S. Spence officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Elwood Koons. Mr. Jacobsen is the son of C. F. Jacobsen and the late Mrs. Jacobsen.

The bride wore a white lace gown with inserts of net in the long train. The sleeves were puffed at the shoulder and ended in points over the waist. The bodice was made with a sweetheart neckline and buttoned to the waist. Her full-length tulle veil fell from a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried a cascade of orchids. She was given in marriage by her brother, Charles Koons.

Mrs. Robert Kirk Thompson, sister of the bride and matron of honor, wore a pink lace gown made like that of the bride's. Her blue tulle hat was draped and she carried a bouquet of blue delphinium and pink roses. Miss Dorothy Koons, another sister of the bride, was dressed like the matron of honor except that her hat was of pink tulle, and flowers of that color.

The remaining attendants were Mrs. William Brockman, of Arlington, Va., and Miss Lillian Crawford. They wore blue net and lace frocks with matching hats of flowers and tulle and carried bouquets of pink roses and blue delphinium.

Mr. Jacobsen served as best man for his son. Ushers were John Montreville Thomas, of Shady Side, Md.; Marvin Wilson, of Alexandria, Va.; Edward Quinn, of Bethesda, Md., and Robert F. Bourne.

Immediately after the wedding a reception for 300 was given at the club. The bride's mother wore a blue chiffon dress with a rose flowered hat and a corsage of pink orchids. Mrs. Charles Jacobsen, sr., grandmother of the bridegroom, assisted.

After a cruise to Bermuda Mr. and Mrs. Jacobsen will be at home in Arlington, Va.

Out-of-town guests included Miss Jean Fugitt, of Greensboro, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller, Mrs. Richard A. Lang, Miss Mabel Tillman and Mrs. Minnie Tillman, all of Baltimore.

Both the bride and bridegroom attended the University of Maryland where Mr. Jacobsen was a member of Theta Chi Fraternity. He also was graduated from Benjamin Franklin School of Accounting. The bride was graduated from George Washington University where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

Short Plays Needed, Pen Women Are Told

Children Require One-Act Dramas That Won't Insult Intelligence, Sarah Truax Albert Declares

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

There is an increasing need of one-act plays which will not insult the intelligence of child audiences, in the opinion of Sarah Truax Albert, actress and chairman of the Department of Drama for the National League of American Pen Women.

Mrs. Albert took time for an interview yesterday, in the midst of preparations for the program she will present Monday night in connection with the banquet following the first day's session of the league's biennial convention, at the Willard Hotel. She is here from her home in Seattle, where she has done teaching and coaching as well as interpretive reviews of plays since her retirement from the stage some years ago. Her last visit to Washington was in a professional capacity, when she was playing in "The Garden of Allah."

Reading to Be Given Monday

The growing importance of junior programs presents a need for suitable plays to be presented for children and to be given by them, said Mrs. Albert. In order to promote interest in this type of play among the pen women, she restricted entries in this season's playwriting contest to one-act productions of this kind. They are in demand by schools, churches and club groups, she said. The winning ones in the contest will be submitted to publishers.

Mrs. Albert will give an interpretative reading Monday night of the play awarded second prize. That which placed first was not so well adapted, she said, to this kind of a presentation. The winner will not be announced until Monday night. There were 20 plays submitted.

There is also a demand for good monologues, needed for teaching character portrayal to students, she said.

Many Present From Other Cities

No interview with Mrs. Albert would be complete without reference to her sculptor daughter, Drusilla, who was married last June to George Kidd, now Berlin correspondent for the United Press. Mrs. Albert and her husband received letters from their daughter until a few weeks ago, when she substituted postcards because of the censorship.

Just before leaving Seattle, Mrs. Albert gave an interpretative review of George Bernard Shaw's play, "In Good St. Charles's Golden Days."

"I did it to make money for the trip here, she said. "If a Pen Woman can't make money with her work, she has no business being a Pen Woman. Whenever I want money for anything special I present a program. And, of course, if I had not had that outlet after leaving the professional stage I should probably have 'just blown up'."

Among other distinguished members of the league who had arrived in the city yesterday, ready for the authors' breakfast this noon and other festivities which precede the opening of the convention Monday, were Kate Speake Penney, of Birmingham, Ala., author of "Land Poor" and other books; Mrs. Grace Dupree Ridings, mother of Hope Ridings Miller, society editor of The Post, and author of two books of poems, who is here from her home in Texas; Mabel Posegate, of Cincinnati, poet laureate of Ohio; Miss George Elliston, for years on the staff of the Cincinnati Times-Star and former editor of the Gypsy, poetry magazine now discontinued; Mrs. Lulu Gabel Giese, of Pittsburgh, national radio chairman.

Among others are Louise Ward Watkins, of Pasadena, national lecture chairman; Harriet Warner Baxter, of Boston, who has been here attending the D. A. R. Congress; Mrs. Beatrice Ayer Patton, wife of Col. Patton, commandant of Fort Myer, who is a member of the Honolulu branch;

Fellowships Award Meeting of A. A. U. W. Shows International Goodwill Is Still Alive

READING the war news, it is hard not to believe that everybody in Europe is hating everybody else. Yet we know that in every country there are men and women who deplore the war and are looking prayerfully for the day when they can join hands with others, at home and abroad, in rebuilding what has been called civilization.

Yesterday there was evidence of this in a news release from the American Association of University Women, announcing the meeting of the Fellowships Award Committee of the International Federation of University Women at Barnard College today. Dr. Esther Caulkin Brunauer, associate in international studies, has gone to New York to attend.

While it was impossible for many of the European associations and federations to send either representatives or applications to the meeting, recent communications from abroad to the American Association of University Women show a faith in the future of international cooperation to forward education for women.

Most important of these messages was from three of the officers of the international federation, Karin Kock, of Sweden, first vice president; Germaine Hannevart, of Belgium, second vice president, and J. M. Bowie, of Great Britain, treasuerer, who recently held a meeting in Brussels, the first since the beginning of the war. In the absence of word from the president of the federation, Dr. Stanislawa Adamowicz, of Poland, these officers have carried on affairs of the organization. They wrote:

"The essential thing for us, as university women, is to keep alive the spiritual values, to keep intact the human inheritance of thought, of free conscience, which will escape destruction.

"Let us give our first thoughts to aid to colleagues in distress, and to safeguarding the encouragement to scientific work through our international fellowships."

From Finland came the message, "We thank our federation friends everywhere for their understanding and assure them that we will work on in faith and patience in the face of any ordeal the future may hold in store." Even in the matter of dues, as one would expect, Finland's group was on record as wishing to pay as soon as possible.

Gathering at Barnard College, Columbia University, the committee will award three international fellowships of approximately $1,500 each, the Mary E. Woolley International Junior Fellowship in Arts, the International Senior Fellowship in Science and a special fellowship to go to a representative of some country which has never yet received one of these awards. These fellowships are open to members of university women's organizations in 34 countries, and are to be used for study in some country other than that of the holder.

Dr. Virginia C. Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard College, past president and one of the founders of the international federation, commented on the continued need for such fellowships: "I think it is of great importance that we should keep the light of learning and internatoinal understanding alight through these dark days so that it may shine out again brightly when the time for reconstructing the world comes."

SORORITY SUPPER — Irene Boughton, of Cincinnati, national executive secretary of Delta Zeta Sorority, will be guest of honor Wednesday night at a supper party to be held at the home of Mrs. Norman B. Ames, of Westmoreland Hills. Election of chapter officers will take place after the supper.

Miss Boughton, who is a past national president of the sorority, will spend a few days here inspecting the active chapter at George Washington University.

Assisting Mrs. Ames will be Mrs. W. C. Houck, Mrs. J. E. Bowman, Mrs. Arthur Hachten, Zoe McFadden, Margaret Neuman and Margaret Herrick.

Top Writers For Children Coming Here

Medal Winners, Nancy Byrd Turner To Attend 'Brunch'

Outstanding writers of children's literature will be in Washington tomorrow to speak at the biennial "Brunch" of the Authors of Books for Children Club being given at noon at the Kennedy Warren.

Three winners of the John Newberry Medal, the award given by the American Library Association each year for the best contribution to children's literature, will be present. They are Eric P. Mme. Elvina Orlicz-Dresser will sing some of the songs of Pearl Adams, composer, who is here from Florida for the convention of the League of American Pen Women. A group of children's songs composed by Elizabeth Merz Butterfield, of Jamestown, N. Y., will be sung by three members of the choir of St. Alban's choir school with the composer at the piano.

Among the other noted authors in attendance will be Grace Thompson Seton, of Connecticut; Marie Ahnighto Peary (the Snow Baby"); Charles Edward Russell, Pulitzer Prize winner; Helen Orr Watson, Lesley Frost, Josephine Chandler Horner, Marion King, Catherine Cates Coblentz, Alice Hutchins Drake, Ann Robinson, Hilda von Stockhum, Georgette Ross Howard, Louise Hartley Fairman and Dr. Fairman, Alberta Walker, Ethel Summy, Alice Rogers Hager and Dr. Paul Bartsch, who will close the program with the valedictory of "God Speed You."

Proceeds of the play will be used to help pay for the barn theater, a project on which campers at Kahlert have long been working.

Film to Depict China's Comeback

A benefit showing of Rey Scott's color film, "China's Comeback," will be held Monday night at 8:30 at Pierce Hall of All Souls' Unitarian Church, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest. This film was recently shown at a party given by Mrs. Ernest Farrington at the Chevy Chase Junior College. So many guests expressed the desire to see it again that the Washington Committee for the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, with the assistance of the Chinese Women's Association, has arranged the program Monday. Proceeds above the cost of the film will be given to the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives through the international committee in Hongkong, which is represented in New York at present by Miss Ida Pruitt.

The Washington group considers itself fortunate to obtain this showing of the film as Scott leaves May 1 for his fifth trip to China.

Burke Blames Defeat on Ire OfPro-Germans

Tell of Threats He Received for Backing Arms Ban Repeal

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, yesterday attributed his primary defeat for Senatorial renomination in large part to opposition from Nebraska's German-Americans to his support of arms embargo repeal.

Burke cited in evidence several letters from Nebraska's German-name element, received before and after his primary defeat in the primaries.

One from Louis W. Setz, Omaha lawyer, assailed "helping England and France by intervention in the war, by the cowardly, dangerous and underhand method of repealing the arms embargo," and declared, "If you, Senator Burke, vote to repeal the embargo on arms, it will be used as grounds for driving you out of public life in Nebraska."

Denying "that all Americans are on the side of England and France," the Setz letter charged "that the President's hatred and activity against Hitler arises from group pressure and the compelling emotion of jealousy. Jealousy because Hitler is a successful autocrat in his own country, while the President tried to be and failed."

Following his defeat, Burke received another letter from Setz stying "I told you so three or four times," and charging Burke voted while in Congress not for Nebraska but for England and France."

Burke was defeated for the Democratic nomination by Gov. Roy L. Cochran, who in November must face the Republican nominee, Hugh Butler.

Europeans Put $1,000,000,000 In U. S. Hands

By the Associated Press

European citizens, afraid that invaders or their own governments would seize their wealth, have cached more than $1,000,000,000 in the United States under the names of other persons.

Both the Federal Reserve Board and the Commerce Department attested last night to this hoarding. Officials noticed that in the year before the war approxmiately $3,400,000,000 worth of gold had been shipped and sold to the United States. But when they came to figuring where the proceeds of the gold went, they could account only for about $2,400,000,000.

Then they found that the other billion dollars had gone mostly to Americans, who were holding it for European friends, while investing the money or depositing it in banks under their own names, so it couldn't be traced.

Much of it has gone to buy real estate, some for securities, some for shares in businesses, some in banks, and a part probably has been buried in back yards and flower pots.

Official Offers To Bet Cromwell Will Resign Soon

By International News Service

A high Administration official last night said he would wager even money that James H. R. Cromwell will resign as American Minister to Canada "within 30 days."

The official expressed belief that Cromwell's announcement of his candidacy yesterday for the New Jersey Democratic senatorial nomination was incompatible with retention of the diplomatic post he assumed in January. Cromwell recently was quoted as saying he expected to request several months' leave of absence "to do my campaigning."

Senator Barbour (Republican, New Jersey), commented:

"Even despite the rebuke by Secretary Hull for his warmongering and all the other criticisms that his many antics have aroused, no one was surprised when Mr. Cromwell at last made the sixth and final announcement of his candidacy for the United States Senate, and certainly I am not disappointed."

Policemen Give $3,500 for Boys

The Metropolitan Police Department yesterday added $3,500 to the fund of the Police Boys Club campaign, bringing the total to about $70,000. The police donation followed Thursday's gift of $854 by the Washington Fire Department.

Campaign Director L. Gordon Leech yesterday instructed the 525 workers to try to see the remainder of their prospects this week-end with a view of reaching the $86,000 goal by May 1.

Gesell to Join Associated Gas, Capital Hears

Was Counsel for SEC In Insurance Study; Howe May Accept Also

Gerhard Gesell, of counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission, in its study of the life insurance industry, will join the legal staff of Associated Gas & Electric, it was reported here yesterday.

Ernest J. Howe, economist of the commission's insurance study, will also join the staff of Associated Gas, it was said. Howe probably will handle most of the economic and statistical data in connection with the presentation which trustees of the system are now preparing for the Federal Court.

The Associated Gas & Electric system was thrown into receivership early thi syear, after the SEC refused to sanction certain financial transactions between the top holding company and the chief underlying subsidiary.

Other New Dealers have associated themselves with the utilities. Leo Crowley, former chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, has joined the Standard Gas & Electric system. Recently George C. Mathews, a Republican appointee to the SEC, accepted a post with a subsidiary of Standard Gas.

By the Associated Press

Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines Corp., told the Monopoly Committee yesterday that machines and mass production had created many more jobs than they had eliminated.

"By the use of improved machines, we have been able to shorten working hours and at the same time increase wages and reduce the price of manufactured goods, resulting in the highest standards of living in the world," Watson said.

Machines "have not caused unemployment in general, althoug there are undoubtedly specific instanees in which they have done so," the industrial leader said.

Examples Are Cited

Watson cited these examples of machines and employment:

In 1890, before the typesetting machine came into general use, there were 30,000 compositors in printing plants of the country. In 1930 there were 184,000.

In 1870, before the typewriter, only 2,100 of every 1,000,000 persons were engaged in office work. Now 33,000 per million follow this vocation.

In 1890, before the accounting machine, there were 159,000 bookkeepers and accountants. In 1930 there were 931,000.

Watson said his corporation's plant at Endicott, N. Y., had been able to shorten the work week from 48 to 40 hours, increase average hourly pay from 58.6 to 89.5 cents, and increase average annual earnings and total employment from 1926 to 1939.

Wages Up 300 Per Cent

He said: "Science and invention and better cooperation between business, labor and Government must be credited with having reduced the hours of labor by more than 40 per cent and with having increased the wage by 300 per cent" since 1860.

"We either must improve and develop these tools or we must begin to throw them away and go back to the $288 annual wage for a 64-hour work week and then to whatever conditions prevailed before 1860," Watson said.

"What we need is more science, invention and machines."

Lewis was awarded $1,000 and Mrs. Lewis $3,800 for permanent injuries to her shoulder.

White Book Tells Why Norse Balked

The German minister arrived at the Norwegian ministry for foreign affairs at 5 a. m. April 9. He handed to Dr. Koht a memorandum stating that the German government had received "documents which proved that England and France had agreed to extend war to territories of neutral countries, by occupying Narvik and other places in Norway."

This action, the German memorandum added, would occur within a few days and, since the German officials did not believe the Norwegians would resist, Germany had "begun certain military operations to occupy strategically important places in Norway."

It pointed out to Norway that Germany was taking this action against its will and for the protection of Scandinavia. Germany did not expect to use Norwegian bases against the Allies unless they were forced to do so, but the Norwegians were warned that any attempt to block German efforts would be immediately crushed.

Hitler's Demands

The White Book then listed 13 demands which Germany submitted to Norway. These demands instructed Norway to:

1. Issue a proclamation to the people asking them not to resist the German troops.
2. Order Norwegian officers to contact the German invaders and hoist a white flag alongside the Norwegian flag.
3. Turn over undamaged all military establishments and fortifications, especially coastal fortifications.
4. Disclose the exact location of all Norwegian mines.
5. Blackout the country immediately.
6. Turn over all means of communication and intelligence service.
7. Prohibit all ships and planes from leaving the country.
8. Guide German troopships into the narrow Norwegian fjords.
9. Ban all external mail and maintain meteorological service for use of German troops.
10. Submit immediately to German censorship.
11. Hand over all radio stations.
12. Halt export trade in goods required at home.
13. Cease using codes known to the British and the French.

Though the white book stated specifically that the Norwegians were already fighting against the Germans in Oslo Fjord and at Bergen hours before these demands were submitted, Dr. Koht asked for time to consult his government. This was granted, though Dr. Brauer emphasized the necessity for speed.

Dr. Koht then left Dr. Brauer and went in to consult other Norwegian ministers who had been in conference all night. When he returned, he reminded Dr. Brauer that Herr Hitler recently had said that people who submit humbly to an aggressor without resisting do not deserve to exist. The Norwegian government, he added, had reached the same decision and had, therefore, decided to reject the Germand demands.

Second Effort Balked

Within a few hours of then, the official record said King Haakon, the crown prince, the crown princess, the government and the Storting (Parliament) left Oslo and went to Hamar, where they were conferring when a report was brought that German troops were en route to Hamar. The Storting, which was meeting at the time, adjourned and moved to Elverum and continued in session there.

At Elverum, the official report said, King Haakon received a telegram from Dr. Brauer asking for an audience. The Storting appointed a committee of four members to negotiate with Dr. Brauer and King Haakon agreed to receive him at 11 a. m. on the tenth.

The peace conference was later postponed until 1 p. m., but, in the meanwhile, erman troops had closed in on Elverum and again King Haakon had to leave.

By 3 o'clock in the afternoon, however, according to the official report, German attacks were repulsed and King Haakon returned to Elverum, where he received the German minister.

At first, King Haakon and Dr. Brauer conferred alone, then, later, Dr. Koht joined them. Dr. Brauer said the demands presented the day before could no longer satisfy the German government. He ordered the creation of a new government, with Quisling at its head. King Haakon said he could not appoint a government that did not have the confidence of the people.

Dr. Koht pointed out to Dr. Brauer that the present Norwegian government was willing to resign and it was here that he asked whether the German government could not consider the creation of a friendly government which would collaborate with Germany. Dr. Brauer, however, insisted on Quisling, and promised to telephone later in the evening for an answer.

When later he called, Dr. Koht told him that Norway would resist, and it was only then that King Haakon sent out a proclamation to the people calling for military resistance against the invaders.

Immediately that this decision was reached, the White Book stated, King Haakon was forced to move from place to place to avoid repeated attacks by German airplanes, but, in the end, the document concludes, the Norwegian government feels confident "that in collaboration with Britain and France, they may save Norway for the Norwegian people."

MONEY

Making . . . Collecting . . . Guarding . . . and Spending it

HOW TO make money—literally. That's one of the episodes in the picture story of the Treasury Department. The Bureau of Printing and Engraving is shown in action. You'll smile at the indifference with which stacks of greenbacks, worth fortunes, are handled by Treasury employes.

Collecting money. That's the Treasury Department function that touches all of us where it hurts. Here's the story of what happens to your income tax blank in Internal Revenue, after it leaves your hands.

Guarding and policing. The Treasury is proud of its six law enforcement agencies: Coast Guard, Customs, Narcotics, Alcohol Tax, Secret Service, and the Intelligence Unit.

And finally—spending. The Treasury—third largest U. S. department—spends some of it on its own personnel. The Procurement Division, which runs the government's store room, spends some on supplies. But the big bulk of it is spent by the Treasury for other departments, for Treasury holds the purse-strings and writes all the checks.

The Sunday Post's picture section shows you the whole scope of this symbolic department. Life in a stenographic pool—behind the scenes with the top executives—the physical substance of the Public Debt—it's all there for you, in words and pictures.

Decoy Purse Nearly Traps A Burglar

Man Believed Wounded as He Breaks From Police On Way to Scout Car

Two prowlers made their escapes after hot pursuits yesterday, one of them, it was believed with two police bullets in his body.

The man believed wounded was fired at last night by a police officer who had run after him for several blocks and had followed him into an apartment house in the 1300 block of Ninth street northwest. There was a brief skirmish in a second-floor room, in which the officer, Private A. T. Davis, fired twice, and the burglar leaped out the window, not to be seen again.

The chase originated in the James Kennedy apartment at 933 N street northwest. Two of Mrs. Kennedy's purses had been stolen from a table near the window in the last month, and last night a dummy pocketbook was placed on the table as a decoy.

"Too Big for Us to Tackle"

The Kennedys waited, and presently a large colored man came through the window, which is off a fire escape landing.

Kennedy described the burglar as "too big for us to tackle," so his young son ran downstairs to the neighbors and called police. Privates Davis and S. A. Marinshaw arrived as the burglar, so far unmolested, descended the fire escape.

The police caught their man two blocks down the street, and were bringing him back to their scout car when he broke loose. Davis then gave chase, trailing the man into the Ninth street apartment.

Another prowler made his escape after looting the Edward H. Mertz residence at 3415 Ordway street northwest, of $350 in valuables and money. The Mertzes were all out when the housebreaker entered yesterday afternoon, but his ransacking was interrupted by the arrival of Edward, jr., 15, a Woodrow Wilson High School pupil.

Pupils Chase Prowler

Edward, hearing noises on the second floor, dashed upstairs, to see a man jumping from a window. The boy ran down, and with a group of schoolmates gave chase. But the man eluded them after a several blocks' pursuit.

Three colored men, two of them armed, held up five persons in a liquor store at 1410 Ninth street northwest last night and robbed Sam Wertleib, a clerk, of $110, and George Smith, also a clerk, of $8. Three customers were forced at a gun's point into a corner.

Lawrence Edward Wilson, 21, of 921 Princeton place northwest, escaped from a holdup man, who stopped him on T street northwest between Sixth and Seventh streets. Instead of turning over his money, Wilson dashed to a filling station across the street. The would-be robber ran the other way.

Richmond, Va., April 19 (AP).—A veteran churchman and a comparatively young newspaper editor were awarded honorary degrees at a special University of Richmond convocation today.

Making the principal address, Dr. Douglas Freeman, editor and author, and rector of the university board of trustees, traced the careers of the two honorees and held their achievements up as examples to the men and women students assembled in Cannon Memorial Chapel.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, yesterday led the opening service of the Children of the American Revolution to the Children's Chapel of Washington Cathedral. Regular sessions of the forty-fifth annual convention will continue through Monday in Memorial Continental Hall.

Delegates of the convention were received at the White House, with two young Washingtonians acting as flower pages. They were Barbara Kimberly, of the Harriet M. Lothrop Society, and Charles H. Williams, jr., of the Richard Lord Jones Society.

Convention Opens Today

Several hundred young Americans have come here to take part in the convention. The national president, Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, will call the convention to order at 9 a. m. today.

Music, dancing and dramatics were presented by young people from the District and nearly a dozen States at a contest stunt program held last night at Epiphany parish hall, 1317 G street northwest. Three prizes were offered both in the class under the age of 14, and in the grouping above 14.

First prize in the first grouping went to Jane and William Gardner, of the Carl Joseph Drake Society, New Rochelle, N. Y., for their Tyrolean folk song. Nine-year-old Nancy Glendenning, of New Jersey, took second prize for her xylophone solos which she announced herself. Margaret Forbes, of Washington, won the third prize with the reading of an original poem.

A play, "The Fatal Quest," with five young members of the organization playing the parts, won first prize in the older age grouping. A youthful baton twirler from Massachusetts, Virginia Summerman, received second place, while third place went to Elaine Murray-Jacoby, from New Jersey, for a sonata she composed and played.

Master of ceremonies was Grahame Smallwood, District junior State president, who was introduced by the senior State president of the District, Mrs. Carl H. Giroux. A reception in the ballroom of the Lafayette Hotel followed.

S.A.R. Foresaw 'Trend' in Isms, Ex-Head Says

Dies' Disclosures Predicted, Ely Avers At Society's Fete

The Sons of the American Revolution Society claimed last night that it had predicted "the trend" in un-American activities now being investigated by the Dies Committee.

Speaking at the golden anniversary celebration of the local S. A. R. at the Mayflower Hotel last night, Selden M. Ely, senior past president of the District Chapter, declared that the society had long been "aware of insidious purposes of Socialists and Communists" in America.

Praising the patriotic work of the S. A. R., Ely said, "The Dies Committee alone has justified our existence and made 'four square' our findings."

Madison Monument Asked

Later in his address, Ely vigorously reiterated a previous call on the society to strive for the erection in Washington of a suitable monument to James Madison.

"No American is more deserving of a monument," he said, "than Madison."

Other Officers Listed

Others installed into office were Dr. W. Harvey Wise, jr., senior vice president; Wade H. Ellis, second vice president; C. Leonard Brown, third vice president; Benjamin D. Hill, jr., secretary; McDonald Miller, assistant secretary; Harvey B. Gram, jr., treasurer; William W. Badgley, registrar; Craig L. Reddish, assistant registrar; Dr. John D. MULLEN

Mullen, who lives with his family at 1247 Thirty-first street northwest, was awarded this year's scholarship on the basis that he had been the outstanding worker in District boys' clubs during the past year.

He attended Western High School and has been a member of the club since 1931. While studying the one-month course in sociology at the university, he will study the practices of boys' clubs in New York.

Be Samaritans, Dr. Potorff Tells East Washington Youth

Dr. A. B. Potorf, of American University, last night asked 300 Methodist youths to stress the "good Samaritan" attitude in developing a worthwhile philosophy of life.

Addressing the first dinner of the new East Washington District Methodist youth organization, the professor of religion said three attitudes of today were "beat them up," pass them up" and "pick them up."

He spoke in the dining hall of the girls dormitories at the university.

Earlier, the young people from 30 churches were led in rousing singing by the Rev. Richard W. Buckingham, and got a huge "kick" from a playlet entitled "The Unhahas," or "Forget the Mule." It was presented by Mount Vernon Place Methodist youths, with Mary Jo Oslin as reader.

Murrell Lank, director of young people's work for the East Washington District, was toastmaster. He introduced guests, including Dr. Edgar C. Beery, superintendent of the Washington District, who gave the benediction. Dr. Beery, Dr. Potorf and others lauded the leadership qualities of Perry Shepherd, president of young people's work in that district. Shepherd is a member of Waugh Methodist Church.

County Jury Asks Cleanup Of Gambling

'Sincere Effort' Urged In Prince Georges; Curfew Favored On Liquor Sales

The Prince Georges County (Md.) grand jury yesterday recommended a gambling cleanup and asked for a midnight curfew on liquor sales to curb drunken driving.

Winding up a 15-day session at Upper Marlboro, the jury reported to Circuit Court Judge Joseph Mattingly that it had "explored the gambling situation within the county and recommended that a more sincere effort be made to clean it up."

This was the extent of the jury's comment on gambling, but it was learned from reliable sources that evidence was considered against a number of alleged lottery and race horse betting establishments.

D. C. Cannot Act

The evidence, however, was not regarded as strong enough to justify indictments, it was said.

Rumors have been rampant in Washington for some time that numbers operators and race horse gamblers had moved their base to the county following the passage of the drastic numbers law in the District and an enactment of a similar ban in Montgomery County, Md.

District officials recently stated that they were helpless to enforce the gambling laws here because most of the gambling barons had fled across the District line.

The jury's report blamed many of the drunken driving cases in the county on the law permitting liquor to be served until 2 a. m., except on Saturday.

A Spot for "Nightcaps"

District bars close at midnight, thus inducing many revelers to drive into Prince Georges County for their "nightcaps."

It was recommended that legislation be sought forbidding sales of all alcoholic beverages after midnight. Mrs. Mary W. Browning, chairman of the county board of license commissioners, in commenting on the report, said it was in accord with recommendations made by the board.

The jury expressed the hope that "more regard can be given to the wishes of neighbors and property owners in the issuance of licenses in the future with references to so many establishments in any one community."

More Police Urged

Other recommendations included:

Appointment of 10 additional county policemen "as soon as practical."

Tightening of the building restrictions and legislative control of tourist and trailer camps.

Reduction of the 50-mile-an-hour speed limit in congested areas.

Appointment of a committee from the Mount Rainier town council and the public service commission for the correction of traffic conditions in the vicinity of Thirty-fourth street and Rhode Island avenue, Mount Rainier.

Civic groups have protested against alleged traffic hazards at the latter intersection since construction of a street car terminal there last summer by the Capital Transit Co. Two men were killed by an automobile two weeks ago while waiting for a street car in a loading zone at the intersection.

The grand jury, which convened April 1, returned 99 indictments after considering 170 cases and examining 381 witnesses. Sixty-three cases were ignored and eight were continued for further investigation.

Richard Breaden, of Beltsville, was jury foreman.

Decatur Plaque To Be Erected At Birthplace

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Md., April 19.—In the quiet of a peach orchard near here tomorrow afternoon Maryland will, after 120 years, erect the first permanent marker at the birthplace of one of America's greatest naval heroes—Commodore Stephen Decatur.

A giant boulder containing a bronze plaque will replace a crude wooden cross that was erected in 1926 by the Eastern Shore Society of Baltimore, the same group that is sponsoring tomorrow's dedication.

Commander Leland P. Lovette, U. S. N., of Washington, will make the principal address.

The plain wording on the plaque leaves to history books the gallant and finally tragic career of Decatur, who became a Marylander by chance, was mortally wounded in a duel at Bladensburg, Md., died in Washington and is buried at Philadelphia.

Decatur's parents left Philadelphia to escape violence and disorder when Lord Howe's British redcoats occupied that city, and he was born soon after in this Worcester County settlement.

D. C. Weighing A 'Philosophy Of Education'

Dr. Holmes Discusses New School Program At Forum on Welfare

A "philosophy of education" has been worked out for District public school students which would recognize both individual and group development, Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools, told a child welfare forum of the District department, American Legion Auxiliary, at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building last night.

Dr. Holmes cited the orientation period of the junior high school, the work of vocational schools, and the opportunity for elective courses in the senior high schools, as principal strengths of Washington's school system.

"A square deal for every child" was requested by Mrs. Betty McCrahon, department child welfare chairman, in presenting the auxiliary's program.

J. B. Irvine, chief of the bureau of vital statistics of the District Health Department, stressed the importance of birth registration and its future helpfulness in a brief address. Dr. E. Raymond Fenton, a member of the speakers bureau of the District Medical Society, discussed means of prevention of tuberculosis in Washington.

Mrs. Helen M. McCabe, chairman of the "8 and 40" child welfare committee, traced the development of interest in children's welfare. Musical selections were offered on the evening's program. Mrs. Betty McCrahon presided.

Arlington Census Woman Is Robbed For Second Time

For the second time in 10 days, Mrs. Maude Dove, Arlington County census enumerator, was robbed yesterday of census data she had compiled, Arlington police were told.

Mrs. Dove, in early afternoon, went to the home of Mrs. F. I Sollenberger, 809 South Buchanan street, Arlington, and asked her to phone this story to the police:

She was sitting in her home, 4713 South Eighth road, Arlington, when a man, about 35 and well dressed, came to her door, saying that he was a census official from the Alexandria headquarters. Entering the house, he began examining Mrs. Dove's census data and then picked up the papers and made to leave.

Mrs. Dove said that she protested and was shoved down. The man left with the papers.

On the night of April 9 she told police she was walking near Ninth street and Glebe road when a car drove up and one of its two occupants leaped out and seized a brief case in which she had census data.

Jobless Pay Act Accord Predicted

McGehee Forecasts An Agreement On Amendments By Thursday

Representative Dan. H. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, yesterday predicted that an agreement will be reached on proposed amendments to the District Unemployment Compensation Act next Thursday. The Judiciary subcommittee of the House District Committee concluded hearings yesterday.

"We're not far apart on the principles," said McGhee, "and both the labor groups and the businessmen want the law amended. I am sure we will be able to bring out a compromise bill."

The major issue, McGhee pointed out, is whether the sliding tax scale shall be retained or whether the tax shall be cut to a flat 2.7 per cent or whether a merit rating system shall be inserted.

Agree on Larger Benefits

The Board of Trade and other business interests are asking for the merit rating system, while the C. I. O. is opposing any reduction in the tax below 2.7 per cent which is the standard set by the Social Security Administration.

The A. F. of L., whose representatives were heard two days ago, has indorsed the McGehee bill and is opposed to the merit rating system.

While all factions are agreed on the increase in benefits to $20 a week, the C. I. O. is asking a minimum of $7 as against the $5 in the McGehee bill and an allowance for dependents, which is not in the measure.

Frank B. Cliffe, controller of the General Electric Co., testified that the merit rating system which permits lower taxes on employers whose pay rolls are stable, constitutes an incentive for keeping employment on an even keel the year around.

Katz Scores A. F. L. Stand

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, in letters to members of the House District Committee urged indorsement of the C. I. O's Eberharter bill, which, Katz argued, contains more liberal benefit provisions. Katz said:

"The A. F. of L. opposition is based merely on political support for Mr. John Marshall, director of the Unemployment Compensation Board, who has stated elsewhere that he objects to dependent's allowances because it means extra work for the Unemployment Compensation Board.

"Members of Congress will agree that the unemployment compensation system was not established to make life easy for those who administer socially desirable laws."

The Federation of Business Men's Associations, through its general counsel, J. Nelson Andrews, yesterday sent to the McGehee subcommittee a resolution suggesting that the pay roll tax be cut from 3 to 2 per cent or less "and that no other changes be made in the present law, especially with respect to the amount and duration of the benefits paid thereunder."

By Robert Tate Allan.

The congregation of Luther Place Memorial Church has just initiated a $7,500 renovation project, first step in a long-range plan of church beautification.

Dr. Rasmussen

Redecorating of the church auditorium, conversion of the basement into a fellowship hall and other features are embodied in the present phase of the plan, which recently got underway with the replacement of old wooden supports under the structure with steel girders.

According to Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, who on June 1 will mark his tenth year as pastor of the Thomas Circle landmark, and the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the ministry, choir dressing rooms will be provided in the basement, along with a modern kitchen. Rebuilding of the tower's interior already has been finished, he said.

The auditorium work, expected to begin very shortly, will include repairing of the historic pews, memorials to President Ulysses Grant, Gen. Robert E. Lee and other distinguished men. Funds from all over America helped build the pews to commemorate the cessation of war between the North and South. New pew cushions will be put in use.

L. M. Leisenring, architect in the War Department and for many years an active Luther Place member, has been elected chairman of the long-term planning commission. Vernon D. George, deacon of the church, engineer in the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and chairman of the congregation's property committee, has been supervising the current stage of the plans.

One of the many organizations that will benefit from the renovation project will be the recently merged three young women's Sunday school classes. Formerly known as the Builders, the Mary and Martha and the Dorcas groups, they now meet jointly under the leadership of Mrs. Gould Wickey, teacher, and on May 8 will have their reorganization meeting.

Youth work at Luther Place, Federated under the Young People's Fellowship, of which Alden Towberman is executive council chairman, embraces the activities of certain Sunday school classes, Luther Leagues and other groups, whose programs will have opportunity for fuller expansion and expression through the enlarged facilities.

The young people publish the Rally Call, a biweekly "newspaper" for the entire congregation, turning the pastor's study and the office of Miss Hazel Anderson, parish worker, into a miniature city room as they go to press—on a mimeograph. The church's youths also will take part in the famous Christmas drama, "The Other Wise Man," which has been produced here for 14 years under Bess Davis Schreiner's direction.

Among organization presidents are: The Ladies Aid Society, Mrs. Robert J. Blocher; the Woman's Missionary Society, Miss Frances Dysinger, also executive secretary of the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society; the Butler Bible Class, W. C. Cronenberg; Rainbow Missionary Society, Miss Augusta Henkelman, and World Service Society, Miss Mabel Maxwel.

Also the Babe of Bethlehem Society, of which Mrs. Charles Gates, who has a record of nearly 30 years of perfect Sunday school attendance; Intermediate Luther League, Miss Gloria Gibbons; Senior League, Miss Phyllis Wickey, and Young People's Luther League, Warren Feldman.

Dr. Gould Wickey, teacher of the Monroe Class, is executive secretary of the United Lutheran Church's board of education.

Sunday school activities, led by trained religious workers, are under three general superintendents. They are Irving L. Koch, also notable for his city-wide religious work; Lawrence Pedersen, and Capt. F. W. Koneman, the last named director of the Census for the Pittsburgh area. Mr. Koch was for many years teacher of the Crusaders Class of young men, led until last week by the Rev. Frederick J. Eckert, formerly assistant pastor at Luther Place. He will be installed tomorrow as new pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, Silver Spring, Md.

Dr. Rasmussen, who will leave in September to assume the chair of systematic theology at his alma mater, Gettysburg Theological Seminary, Gettysburg, Pa., pointed out yesterday that a congregation meeting will be held at Luther Place after tomorrow morning's service to call a Gettysburg student as the new assistant pastor.

He will be the Rev. Carl Folkemer, who will begin his duties May 15 after his graduation from the seminary. A Baltimorean, he and his twin brother will be graduated at the same time. Another brother also is considering a ministerial career.

Growing interest is manifested in the Men's Brotherhood, which will be addressed tonight at 6:30 o'clock by Senator Alexander Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin. Led by William C. Cronenberg, the group is sharing in the support of a Gettysburg student being sent to India as missionary. The men also are active in the Maryland Synodical Brotherhood.

Other active organizations at Luther Place are the chorus choir, of which Cornelia Long Kinsella is organist-director. They recently sang over the "Church of the Air" program. The quartet includes Paul Ledig, tenor; Mrs. George J. Challet, soprano; Mrs. Mitchell A. Marques, contralto, and Charles Whitten, barytone. Dr Rasmussen praised the choir as one of his most faithful organizations.

Dr. Rasmussen also lauded his church council, to which election is possible only through a pledge to give each Wednesday night of the month to the duties.

The first Wednesday the men must attend the council's business session and on the other Wednesdays must call on at least three homes of members on the church rolls. These calls, he stressed, are exclusively in the interest of church felowship and to explain the church's program. Following the calls the men and their wives gather at one of their homes for a fellowship hour.

Albert A. Grorud, secretary of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, is president of the council. Other officers are Mr. Leisenring, Martin Meyer, George Eberly, Elvin Zimmerman, Wilmer Schantz and Grorud, elders, and Capt. Koneman, C. S. Christensen, W. C. Summer, Vernon D. George, J. C. Roberts, G. R. Sager, Lloyd A. Nelson and Leonard E. Nelson, deacons. Mr. Nelson is council secretary and Frank A. Burger, treasurer.

Native of Troy, N. Y., where he received his early schooling, Dr. Rasmussen later attended preparatory school at Hartwick Seminary, Otego, N. Y., 4 miles from Cooperstown, where baseball was born.

He was graduated as valedictorian for his class from Gettysburg in 1912 and from the theological seminary three years later. He served pastorates in Zion Lutheran Church, Newville, Pa.; Trinity, Altoona, Pa.; Zion, Greensburg, Pa., and Messiah, Harrisburg, Pa.

While at the latter place he served as director of Christian education for the State Sunday School Association and at the time of his call to Luther Place in 1930 was president of the Eastern Pennsylvania Synod of the United Lutheran Church.

He is a past president of the Maryland Synod, the Washington Federation of Churches. He was general chairman of the committee arranging the visit of Kagawa, famed Japanese Christian leader, and spoke on the National Preaching Mission in 1937. He is a former board member of the Central "Y" and was chairman of the 1939 layman's award committee of the Federation of Churches.

Among the National Capital's historic churches, Luther Place was formally organized in 1873 by the late Dr. John G. Butler, although the congregation worshiped for several years prior to that in a chapel on the present site at Fourteenth and N streets and Vermont avenue northwest. Dr. Butler was for many years one of America's outstanding Lutheran leaders.

"LOVE DIVINE, ALL LOVES EXCELLING"
• • • CHARLES WESLEY • • •

Love divine, all loves excelling,
Joy of heav'n to earth come down!
Fix in us Thy humble dwelling;
All Thy faithful mercies crown.
Jesus, Thou art all compassion,
Pure, unbounded love Thou art;
Visit us with Thy salvation;
Enter ev'ry trembling heart.

Few of the earlier hymns dwelt upon the thought of God as Love. The popularity of this hymn is probably partly due to the fact that it does address God in this way every line bespeaks the rich, human experience found in the Divine Love. It is truly a sermon in song, preached by one of the world's greatest hymn writers

Merle Oberon, Brent Co-Star In Earle Film

'Til We Meet Again' Is Remake of Hit; V. M. I. Club Sings

By Richard L. Coe.

"'TIL WE MEET AGAIN." Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play by Warren Duff, from an original story by Robert Lord; costarring Merle Oberon and George Brent, with Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Binnie Barnes, Frank McHugh, Eric Blore, Henry O'Neill, George Reeves, Frank Wilcox, Doris Lloyd, Marjorie Gateson, Reta Toomey, William Halligan, Victor Killian and Wade Boteler. Directed by Edmund Goulding. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Thanks to the fragile loveliness of Merle Oberon, "'Til We Meet Again," the Earle's new feature, becomes a fairly appealing remake of an old favorite, "One Way Passage." With George Brent as her costar, the darksome heroine of "Wuthering Heights," by her elusive charm lightens a story inclined to be heavy.

Not that this romance is not somber, even tragic, but should you recall William Powell and Kay Francis in its 1932 version, you will remember that it was often a gay, brittle piece. In its modernized form, the production details are more lush and the unhappy overtones are more stressed.

When Brent meets Miss Oberon in the Hongkong bar, he is shortly to be nabbed by Policeman Pat O'Brien and brought back to San Quentin to die. Miss Oberon's heart trouble places her life in the same shadowy certainty of death. Both love the things of this world and keep from each other their unhappy secrets.

McHugh in Old Role

But while the girl is resigned to her sad fate, Brent still hopes to escape. His efforts and those of some of the "cons" on shipboard, whom he has known, occupy the action that is not given over to the hopelessness of their romance. Only in their final moments together do the lovers know each other's unhappy secret and even then each thinks his own is safe. Their next meeting, they plan, will be at a bar in Mexico City on New Year's Eve, where they will drink their favorite "Paradise" cocktails, break the slight glasses and lay the stems side by side. And in Mexico City January 31, that very thing happens, although the lovers are nowhere to be seen. That's how "'Til We Meet Again" is romance with a touch of philosophy.

Frank McHugh, as an old friend of the groom, so to speak, has the same role he had in the earlier version and is both familiar and successful with its comedy. Binnie Barnes is effective, too, as a phony French countess whose "branch bank of England" is ably embodied in the effulgent form of Eric Blore. Geraldine Fitzgerald is particularly fine as an understanding friend and O'Brien lends a bright touch of surprise when, for no obvious reason, he lapses into a thick Irish brogue for his final, but tender, scene with the repentent Miss Barnes.

V. M. I. Glee Club Sings

As usual, the Earle stage revue is swift moving and brightly costumed. Fred Sanborn, the chalk-faced comic with the marimba, had our chair rocking with its load of quivering flesh. His pantomimic style is a relief from the microphone-huggers.

Yo-Yo, the dancing horse, prances brilliantly despite his confining arena and June Forest's soprano hits the chandeliers in some familiar airs. DeVal, Merle and Lee turn their proper dance routine into an hilarious shambles and the reliable Roxyettes look particularly fetching in their "Organdy" number.

Appearing for three days only, the glee club of Virginia Military Institute brings some lusty melody to open the stage proceedings.

'Rebecca' Held At the Palace

"Rebecca," David O. Selznick's scrupulously executed film version of the novel by Daphne du Maurier, yesterday entered its second week at Loew's Palace Theater without diminution of the overwhelming enthusiasm that has greeted the local showing of this interesting and slightly lugubrious tale of a household dominated by twisted memories of its first chatelaine.

Except in its climax and denouement the celluloid "Rebecca" adheres with fine fidelity to Miss du Maurier's original work. The memory of Rebecca, the first Mrs. Max de Winter—deceased under mysterious circumstances that the picture makes decidely hazy, if not utterly untenable—governs the lives of her nearest survivors and lends the movement of the story an eerie quality of invisible power that sets it apart from most others.

Laurence Olivier, as Max de Winter, keeps his amirable performance completely within the character and stamps himself again as one of the foremost young actors in the contemporary theater. Opposite him, as the second Mrs. de Winter, constantly under the shadow of the first Joan Fontaine does by far the best work she ever has brought to the screen in a role that affords her such an opportunity as she never has had before. Judith Anderson, Florence Bates, Nigel Bruce, C. Aubrey Smith and many others perform capably in secondary assignments.

The short subjects also are being held over, plus a new issue of the "News of the Day."

Fan Clubs

Century Soon

Alan Mowbray is portraying his seventy-eighth motion picture role in "The Double Dyed Deceiver," produced by Harry Sherman and featuring Tito Guizar and June Clayton in the leading parts.

Horace Heidt's 'Pot of Gold' Hour Tops New Bill at Loew's Capitol

Famous Band Hits In Swift Program; Screen Feature Has Its Bright Moments

"TWO GIRLS ON BROADWAY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Edmund Goulding, adapted to the screen by Joseph Fields and Jerome Chodorov, costarring Lana Turner, Joan Blondell and George Murphy with Kent Taylor, Richard Lane, Wallace Ford, Otto Hahn, Lloyd Corrigan and Dan Wilson. Songs by Nacio Herb Brown, Arthur Freed, Roger Edens, Harry Revel and Ted Fetter; dances directed by Bobby Connolly and Eddie Larkin. Directed by S. Sylvan Simon. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

The highlight of this week's bill at Loew's Capitol Theater—and it is a very bright one, indeed—is provided by Horace Heidt and His Musical Knights in a stage modification of their "Pot of Gold" radio broadcasts.

BELL

Seen on Washington rostrums many times before, the handsome Mr. Heidt's handiwork never before has been quite so effective as it is on this visit. The hour-long "Pot of Gold" program is an uninterrupted feast of melody in all moods and tempos, richly spiced with comedy and punctuated by the clever contributions of an especially gifted group of specialists.

Profitable Phone Book

The "Pot of Gold" feature of the program is maneuvered by a Washington telephone book, divided into four volumes, and three spinning "carnival wheels." The whirl of the first wheel determines the volume of the telephone book from which a number is to be selected; the second, the page of that volume from which the lucky number is to be chosen; the third, the entry on that page that is to be called by phone. If the person called answers the phone he or she receives a prize of $5. If the lucky person happens to be in the audience, $100 in cash is the award. In honor of yesterday's first performance, two calls were made, no answer being received to the first. The second won a $5 prize that would have been $100 had the recipient known Heidt and His Knights were in town—she knew all about the program and the nature of its working.

Among the foremost of the Heidt specialty artists are Frankie Carle, pianist-composer, whom Mr. Heidt deems the coming George Gershwin; Fred Lowry, the blind whistler, whose artistry—especially in a note-for-note rendition of the "William Tell" overture—stopped the show hot in its tracks; Larry Cotten, tenor; Henry Russell, balladist; Red Ferrington, a comedian with an infectious laugh; the Four Le Alm Sisters, vocal harmonists; Art Carney, a mimic particularly adroit in his impersonations of Al Smith and President Roosevelt, and Bernie Mattinson, the Gene Krupa of the outfit.

Screen Feature Runs Second

With their offerings interlarded with a wide variety of orchestral numbers and Heidt's glib, running commentary on what his program is all about, the act is one of the most roundly satisfying that has played a local theater in months.

The major screen attraction, "Two Girls on Broadway" suffers from the speedy stage competition against which it is pitted. It is one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's lesser efforts, having to do with two girls from the heart of Nebraska and their boy friend, in New York, who attempt the familiar business of crashing Broadway under the twin handicaps of meager ability and complicated love affairs. Among the three stars, Lana Turner and George Murphy are a little more conspicuously cast than Joan Blondell, the suffering heroine of the goings-on. Kent Taylor, Wallace Ford and Richard Lane lead a supporting company that manages to build up two catchy songs and some neat dancing by Miss Turner and Mr. Murphy.

Art Brown, in his tenth week at the console of the Wurlitzer organ—and he really had the capacity crowd singing its collective head off at yesterday's first performance—and the Fox Movietone News complete a bill architectured exclusively for fun.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, April 19.

FOR MANY YEARS the vaudeville act of "Claire and Senna Sisters" waited, in vain, for an engagement at Loew's State. For some reason, they couldn't make it . . . Last week Claire was standing in front of the Palace Theater, lamenting the New Day with a group of other lay-offs. He saw John Monroe, of "Monroe and Grant," the veteran vaudevillians, who had just opened at Loew's State. Monroe greeted him: "Hel-lo, John," and then collapsed. He died immediately, in Claire's arms . . . The distraught Claire went home, where he found the Senna Sisters waiting. "We've got grand news for you," they told their trembling partner. "An act fell out at Loew's State. We've got to go right over and fill in—for someone who died."

JEROME FRANK, chairman of the SEC, is trying to be relieved of his duties, so that he can return to private practice . . . The best known women's association, organized to fight Labor-abuses, will soon be depicted by a batch of resignations . . . Giovanni, the professional pickpocket who lifted President Roosevelt's wrist watch three times this year, and who swiped J. Edgar Hoover's suspenders, wanted to join the entertainers who gave a show at Sing-Sing last Sunday. The sponsors, however, wouldn't permit Giovanni to perform there . . . Ted Husing brought Betty Lawford to the illustrators show Wednesday night, left the room, and when he returned, Betty had a surprise for him: Entwined hearts were tattooed on her knees.

MRS. DONALD OGDEN STEWART took her young son, Peter Steffens, to San Francisco to see Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh in "Romeo and Juliet" . . . Mrs. Stewart wasn't quite sure whether Shakespeare is still an accepted drama-vehicle for modern Youth. Her doubts soon were shattered. For when, in the second act, it appeared that Romeo would get his Juliet, Pete leaned forward in his seat, nudged his mother and said: "Hot Dog!"

ON THE OUTSKIRTS of Tucson, Ariz., Columbia Pictures built a reproduction of old Tucson, for the Clarence Buddington Kelland movie, "Arizona." That movie set cost $150,000. It's such an accurate reproduction of the old city, and looks so habitable, that a new worry has beset the producers. Thirty-two migrant Mexican families have moved into those set-houses, and refuse to move.

THE MUNICIPAL JOB in which David Rockefeller is interested is with the New York City Housing Authority. He wants to busy himself in slum-clearance . . . Tom Dewey saw Senator Vandenberg at the Gridiron Dinner last Saturday, walked up to him, and shook hands. He looked at the man seated in the next chair, and asked Vandenberg: "Who's he?" The man was Senator Bridges, another candidate for the Republican nomination . . . Franceska Gaal will play the supporting role to Deanna Durbin, in Joseph Pasternak's "Spring Parade." When Pasternak produced that film in Hungary, years ago, Franceska had the role which Deanna will play.

M. LINCOLN SCHUSTER, of Simon & Schuster, now is in California. He sent a picture-postcard to a New York lady, with a message: "The scenery is here, wish you were beautiful" . . . The AGVA has stopped Ethel Barrymore Colt from starting her engagement at Mon Paris . . . Gloria Swanson has severed her association with the Trans-America Broadcasting Co. . . . Joe E. Lewis complains of a prize-hangover. He woke up and found not only the little man who wasn't there, but also that the man had brought his friend along.

Durbin Hit Is Augmented by 'Time' Subject

'American Youth, 1940' Adds Sober Note to 'It's a Date,' Repeat

"IT'S A DATE." Universal picturization of a screen play by Norman Krasna starring Deanna Durbin, with Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon, Eugene Pallette and Cecilia Loftus. Directed by William Seiter. New "March of Time" added. Reviewed (second week). Friday afternoon.

American youth rules the roost triumphantly in the effervescent entertainment now on tap for the second week at RKO-Keith's. Deanna Durbin caps her great vocal accomplishments with several amusing adolescent whirls at tearing passion to tatters. A cross section of the problems of privileged and underprivileged American youth is given smart and brilliant exposition in the "March of Time's" new "American Youth—1940," added to the bill yesterday.

Playing the stage-enchanted daughter of a great actress, little Miss Durbin is placed in a more theatrical milieu than in previous pictures. It's a happy situation because it gives Deanna a chance to expand and show what she can do in comedy and mock-tragedy. She's a cunning and saucy young baggage who eats, drinks and dreams theater and is naturally destined to follow her mother's footsteps until her name blazes in electric lights.

But even a stage star's daughter doesn't find the going completely smooth on the road to stage fame. We see Deanna toiling in the "straw-hat theater," bamboozling and coaxing producers and actors, tossing mock dramatics whenever they serve her purpose, even going Garbo just for practice. Love prances in and out of the story, but more in the manner of a clattering cab-horse. Deanna doesn't really like love, she just likes to kick it around.

All of this shimmering foolery makes for gay diversion. It also advances La Durbin definitely as a star. You'll not forget Deanna practicing a dramatic role on what she thinks is the deserted hurricane deck of a liner, while the ship's officers are doubled up with glee.

The Durbin vocals are beautiful as ever. Especially lovely are "Loch Lomond," "Musetta's Waltz" and "Ave Maria." Handsome support is given to the young star by Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon and Cecilia Loftus.

"American Youth—1940" is another "March of Time" production that gives you food for thought. Its searchlight skims across all classes of American young folk from the top-rank young laddies, who averaged $25 a week pocket money and whose dads pay for $25 hats and $150 dresses, to those boys who have never had a steady job nor an overcoat, and who apply for jobs in borrowed clothes. One terse statement that will set you back on your heels is that crime among American youth has increased 22 per cent during the ten years of the depression.

MARY HARRIS.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 19 (INS). One hundred thousand dollars is a big sum to pay for two books which are yet to achieve readers' interest. Yet Hal Wallis was elated today because Jack Warner was able to buy "Mr. Skeppington," and "King's Row," by Henry Bellamann, for this really record-breaking amount. When I walked into Hal's office he had the laudatory book reviews on his desk and also the statement that "Mr. Skeppington," by the author of "Enchanted April"—best seller of some years ago—was the book of the month.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"Mr. Skeppington" is intended for Bette Davis and "King's Row" for James Cagney and John Garfield. Interesting the way the Hollywood market has swerved toward books since the phenomenal success of "Gone With the Wind," "My Son, My Son," "Rebecca" and "Grapes of Wrath." The producers are finding that the paying customers read this new fiction and that it is already established before the picture is put on the screen.

The executives in the front office at M.-G.-M. couldn't have been more surprised when Greta Garbo walked in and asked that Spencer Tracy be given the role of Dr. Pierre Curie in her next picture "Mme. Curie." She insists that the French doctor Curie was just as important with his experiments on radium as his wife and is as necessary to the movie as the famous Polish Mme. Curie herself. I don't know whether Garbo will have her way, but I do know that Spencer has been reading the life of Mme. Curie and that he met Garbo when he was at the La Quinta near Palm Springs a few weeks ago and is interested in co-starring with her.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: George Barnes, once wed to Joan Blondell, is the proud papa of a baby girl; who calls Mary Martin every day by long distance between 2 and 3 in the afternoon from Tulsa, Okla.? Virginia Field spent the day shopping with Richard Greene's mother for furniture for Dickie's new mansion, which, of course, she will occupy soon; Lana Turner's hair is now dark red; Ricardo Cortez is fighting the flu and George Raft is sick with a cold and unable to report at the studio; Rose (Mrs. Harry) Cohn, back in Hollywood after a year's absence and looking like a million. She was at Eddie Robinson's tea and just about everyone in town was there. Nice to see Harry Lachman back after his long absence. Chia, he told me, was home sick.

Frank Capra leaves for Dallas today and returns Monday; Tony Martin and Jean Frazee, of the Frazee singers, at Victor Hugo's together. This is where Alice Faye and Tony Martin first met and they just avoided meeting each other again by two minutes; Carl Laemmle, jr., alternating between Mary Rogers and Helen Fortescue Reynolds, escorting both of them to Slapsie Maxie's.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Columbia

That ingratiating cinema biography suggested by incidents in the boyhood of Thomas A. Edison returned to F street yesterday at the Columbia Theater. With Mickey Rooney in the title role, the film is a dexterous mixture of comedy and screen portraiture that is bound to make an audience happy.

This prologue to the forthcoming film on "Edison, the Man," is a loosely connected series of boyish adventures made wholeheartedly natural and charming by the superb playing of young Rooney. Whether about to blow up a school or a railway train, or whether he is being of vital importance in saving his mother's life or those of strangers, the character is stirringly alive.

Fay Bainter's understanding mother is an exceptionally telling portrait and Virginia Weidler's sporty sister is on a par with Rooney's fine achievement. George Bancroft, Eugene Pallette, Victor Kilian, J. M. Kerrigan, Bobbie Jordan and Elly Malyon are others in the supporting cast, expertly directed by Norman Taurog.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 19.

One of the funniest things in town are the ads, paid for by Woody Van Dyke, one of Metro's ace directors, and his huge sign outside his office, on that same lot, soliciting funds to send a delegation to the Democratic Convention in Chicago, with this slogan, "We Want Roosevelt." Yet the boss of that studio is Louis B. Mayer, friend of Herbert Hoover, and a good Republican.

Kathryn Adams, the new Universal discovery who just finished "Ski Patrol," started her acting career at the age of three, reciting this masterpiece:

"My father is a butcher,
My mother cuts the meat.
And I'm the little wienerwurst
That runs around the street."

She doesn't think Hollywood is unique—people don't kid themselves any more here than they do back in St. Paul—it's just done on a bigger scale and with more publicity. Good acting, she says, is a cultivated technique of showing off, and adds, with an embarrassed smile, "You know, that's what I am—a showoff."

One of the little 11-year-old boys on the "Tom Brown School-days" set bears a striking likeness to Charlie Laughton. When someone mentioned it to him the other day, Laughton took a look at the kid and said, "Ugly little nipper, isn't he?"

When I bumped into George Kaufman who's just signed an enormous contract at Warners to produce his plays, he looked so pleased and said, "I've become so pleasant I even frighten myself."

Paulette Goddard is so popular with the errand boys that they toss a coin to see which one runs for her. They don't know it, but one boy has a coin with heads on both sides.

And Gail Patrick is so nuts about baseball that for a gag, Bob Cobb, owner of the Hollywood team, bought her a 10-cent purse in the shape of a pitcher's glove, which she uses in preference to all others.

Nat Errors Help Yanks Win, 5-3; Harris Ejected

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, APRIL 20, 1940 17

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, April 19.—We don't know who developed the theory that lefthanded pitching could stop the Yankees, but the seven other clubs in the American League seem to be stuck with it. On paper the theory does have a certain appeal, what with the Yankees so emphatically lefthanded, but in practice it holds no more water than a coarsely knit sieve.

Povich

As soon as the Yankees poke their noses into any town in the circuit, or as soon as any other American League club hits Yankee Stadium the opposing manager hauls all available southpaws out of storage and calls it strategy. The fact that the Yankees have never showed any weakness against southpaw pitching doesn't seem to matter. It's the same routine with every club they meet: Throw a southpaw at the Yanks.

It doesn't matter, either, apparently that the pitcher who last year had the most success against the Yankees was a righthander, Washington's Dutch Leonard, who beat 'em four times. Nor was any object lesson learned from the treatment the Yankees gave the southpaws who faced them last season. In 1939, managers sent lefthanded pitching against the Yankees in 50 games. Only 14 times did the Yanks lose to southpaws. In fact, they won a higher percentage of games against lefthanded pitchers than against righthanders.

Bucky Harris is laughing at the one major league record accredited to him in the new edition of The Baseball Register. He is the player who, according to the Register, was hit by pitched balls more times during one season than any other man. In 1924, Harris was hit 21 times.

"It may not be a record to be proud of," smiled Harris, "but I took many a bruise and bump making it. Getting hit by a pitched ball is kind of a lost art nowadays. Frankie Crosetti of the Yanks, is probably the best man in the league at it. Fifteen years ago it was part of the game to get hit if you could. It's sickening to see batters duck away from the plate, trying to get away from some of that slow stuff that wouldn't hurt a baby.

"Sure, I tried to get hit deliberately a lot of times. It wouldn't hurt to take some of those curve balls under ribs or anywhere else. They fined me $25 for stepping into a ball one time, but it's tough on the umpire to tell when it's deliberate.

"I'll never forget one game in 1924. Red Ruffing was pitching for the Red Sox then. We were playing in Washington and the score was tied in the ninth inning. The bases were full and I was next up. It was getting dark and I knew I would never get a hit off Ruffing. As I left the dugout, I said to the Washington players, 'I'll never get a hit off this guy, but if he throws one inside, I'll make it hit me.' And that's what happened. The first pitch was inside and I turned my back on it and could have shouted for joy when I felt it hit me, forcing in the winning run."

That evening, Harris relates, there was a discussion at the dinner table at the home of his father-in-law-to-be, Senator Sutherland, of West Virginia. Miss Elizabeth Sutherland, Harris' fiance, was remarking that "I believe Stanley deliberately got hit by Ruffing's pitch this afternoon, dod."

The Senator frowned. "I don't believe it," he said ponderously. "I don't believe Stanley would do such an unsportsmanlike thing as that."

Next week up in Boston, a tall young right-hander will go to the pitching mound for the Nats. He will be Sidney Hudson, fresh out of the Class D Florida State League, and the fact that he was beaten, 7-0, by the Red Sox the other day in his maiden big league venture will not deter Bucky Harris from sending him to the mound against the same team.

"That 7-0 beating may look bad for Hudson on the face of it, but actually the kid pitched a pretty good ball game against the Red Sox," said Harris. "He wasn't panicky, he had pretty good stuff on the ball and I'm not going to quit on him. He was pitching a little bit too fine. He wanted to strike out everybody who faced him. He's not normally wild. He wants another chance at 'em and he's going to get it."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 19.—Kid McCoy sat down at a desk in his little hotel room in Detroit and scrawled, "I can't stand this world's madness any longer." Then he popped enough sleeping pills in his mouth to stop the ticking of his heart—and passed on to an after-life that couldn't conceivably be as adventurous as the one he left behind him.

CONSIDINE

Norman Selby, for that was the real McCoy's real name, represented a good big section of boxing's fabulous background. He probably couldn't have lived and thrived in any other endeavor except boxing, which spawns the strangest figures in existence.

We never saw him fight, of course, but we were one of the last to write a story about him. Not many months ago he came back to New York and to the Broadway where hundreds once stopped to watch him strut past. He was looking for somebody to publish the story of his life. Jack Doyle, his friend, asked us to come up to meet him and we remember being surprised and disappointed. For this fabled figure of the past was a quiet, vague man who wore a cheap white polo shirt and eye glasses. Only when he got up to move across the room did you get a hint of the miraculous locomotion and the coordination which made him great.

This was his life: He was married nine times, killed a divoreee named Mrs. Theresa Mors, served seven and a half years of a 20-year sentence, had 200 fights, won 196 of them, spent a fortune, went bankrupt, lived in Riviera villas and in flophouses, beat a huge Kaffir chief in a fight at an African trading post by spreading tacks on the canvas, served with Pershing in Mexico, all but cracked mentally while serving as the keeper of a great jockey who was a dipsomaniac, and finally finished up as a nightwatchman at the Ford Motor Co.

And still he decided that the world was madder than he. From the looks of the front pages, he may have been right!

A new high (or low) for indorsements by athletes was set recently in London when Eric Boon, British lightweight champion, owed his success to the following commodities in the same issue of the Daily Mail: Shredded Wheat, Wright's Coal Tar Soap, Everton Toffee, National Kippers ("quite the best"), Favlot Shirts, McKenzie Tweeds, Wardonia razors, Old Chart tobacco, Palethorpe's Sausages ("the finest sausages I've ever tasted") Vita Glucose ("a great boon to athletes") and Garagard Tennis shoes.

At the risk of bodily harm, we predict that the Lou Ambers-Lew Jenkins fight May 10 will be a Lou-Lew.

Al Trahan's recent offer to provide Van Mungo with a chiropractor was not the first such offer to come from Dodger zealots. Last year a Brooklyn fan named William Sweitzer wrote Larry MacPhail that "all that your big lug needs to put his money flipper in shape is to put it to some other use than carrying groceries to his coppers." He offered to provide a chiropractor who would work on Mungo's arm between innings. A folding table was to have been placed in the passage way leading down from the dugout—and Van was to take his chiropractic beating on it between innings.

MacPhail said no, or words to that effect.

Jockey Wall Cheats Death in Fall at 'Graw

Mount Falls With Rider Underneath

Two Stitches Taken In Head; Bright Harvest Takes First Race on Card

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 19.—Jockey Nick Wall, one of the Nation's outstanding riders, had a narrow escape from death in today's first race when he fell from his mount. Fancy Free, his 2-year-old mount, stumbled and unseated Wall as he was running well up in the field and nearing the stretch turn. Wall dangled from the side of the horse, his foot caught in the stirrup and his right hand holding the rein. Jockey R. Wholey, who was riding Oak Tar near the rear of the field, saw Wall's plight and pulled up in an attempt to get him free. Wholey grabbed Wall's blouse, but the mud-covered silks slipped from his grasp.

Fancy Free then fell with Wall apparently under him, but the jockey became free and the horse arose to finish in the field. Jockeys said that when Wall first lost his seat on the horse he yelled to other riders, "Watch out, I'm going off."

Taken to Hospital

Wall was taken to the track hospital, where two stitches were taken in a deep cut on his head. He refused further hospital treatment and left with a friend for Baltimore before the fourth race. He said that he was thankful for the rule requiring jockeys to wear skull caps. His protector was dented. Either the horse or Wall knocked down one of the posts on the rail.

Wall's accident was not the only excitement in the first race. After a thrilling finish that saw four horses stretching their noses toward the wire, the objection, photo finish and dead-heat lights were flashed. The winner was the Millsdale Stables' Bright Harvest, ridden by Jockey Ralph Neves. Last Bet, a 100-1 shot, and Nancy V., of the Trainer Bon-

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Above—A field of 165 game distance runners gets off to the start yesterday in the annual B. A. A. marathon, longest of recognized road races over one of the world's toughest courses—distance of 26 miles 385 yards. In lead are No. 15, Lloyd Evans, of Verdun, Canada, and George Cote. (No. 8), of Verdun. Below—Cote flashes across the finish line to win in the record-breaking time. The 26-year-old Canadian news dealer covered the distance in 2 hours 28 minutes 28 3-5 seconds. Old mark was 2:28:51 4-5

Cote Breaks Record In 26-Mile Marathon

Race Called Probably Fastest in History; Johnny Kelley Finishes Second With Baltimore's Don Heinicke Third

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 19.—The range of hills that appeared as steep as peaks for the past four years seemed as flat as a prairie to 26-year-old Gerard Cote, of Verdun, Quebec, today as he won the forty-fourth A. A. Marathon in the record time of 2 hours 28 minutes 28 3-5 seconds.

It probably was the fastest marathon in history.

Cote lowered by 23 1-5 seconds the mark for the 26 miles, 385 yards stretch from Hopkinton to Boston that Ellison (Tarzan) Brown set last year, and he finished more than half a mile in front of the closest of his 164 rivals, little Johnny Kelley, of Arlington, the 1935 victor.

Kelley's time was 2:32.00 3-5.

Baltimorean Third

Don Heinicke, of Baltimore, last year's runner-up and winner of the recent Pat Dengis Memorial Marathon in his home city, was third in 2:32.21. The two-time winning Leslie Pawson, Pawtucket, R. I., alderman, placed fourth in 2:33.09, and the experienced Paul Donato, of Boston, was fifth in 2:34.54.

The rest of the ten finishers were Andre Brunelle, of Medford, 2:35.20; Robert (Scotty) Rankin, of Preston, Ontario, the Canadian Marathon champion, 2:37.44; Fred McGlone, of Boston, 2:37.49; George Durgin, of Boston, 2:38.21, and Frank Darrah, of Boston, 2:43.38.

Cote, noted more for his snowshoe racing—he holds the world record of 63 minutes for the 10-mile distance—than for his marathoning, announced beforehand that this would be his fifth and probably his last Boston race. He now is awaiting a call to join the Canadian Air Force.

Managed for Seventh Once

In his previous starts, he finished twenty-second, seventh and twice he ran eighth because he explained, he was unable to nurse himself over the cruel Newton hills. He was so determined to master them today that he spent the last two weeks training on a 6-mile stretch in Cumberland, R. I., that contained eight grades much steeper than any on the Marathon course.

Cote led for the first 10 miles, closely followed by Brown, Rankin, Kelley, Heinicke, Donato and several other favorites. When he hit the first and easiest grade, he slowed down and was passed by four rivals, headed by Brown. The latter, a Narragansett Indian, headed the pack over the second hill, but when a cramp tied up his right leg, Kelley and Rankin took command of the punishing race.

They ran side-by-side to the 21-mile point but their pace over the last hill, highest of all, took so much out of them that the smooth-running Cote regained the lead during the next 2 miles. He was a minute behind the record at 23 miles, where he shook off Kelley and raced easily to complete his fastest marathon.

Five College Events Carded Here Today

G. W., Temple Nines Postpone Game; G. U. Gridders Meet Saints

By Jack Munhall.

Rain and wet grounds continued yesterday to disrupt the spring sports schedules of the local colleges as Georgetown University postponed a tennis match with American University and canceled a ball game with Temple.

Simultaneously George Washington University announced that its ball game scheduled with Temple this afternoon at Griffith Stadium has been postponed indefinitely because of the unplayable condition of the diamond. An effort will be made to play the game next week.

With that postponement today's local card is unusually light with only five events slated for home consumption. American University's nine will meet Randolph-Macon on the A. U. field at 2:30; Catholic University's track squad will play host to William and Mary, Norfolk division, at the same hour, while Washington A. A tackles North Carolina in lacrosse at Central Stadium and Maryland's tennis team engages Johns Hopkins at College Park. The last two-named contests are scheduled for 3 and 3:30, respectively. Collegiate sailing will be officially launched at 2:30 off Hains Point when G. W., G. U. and Penn State will hold a triangular dinghy race.

Hoya Gridders Busy

Out-of-town activity pits Georgetown's football squad in scrimmage against Mount St. Mary's at Emmitsburg, Md.; Maryland's track team against Rutgers and American University's tennis team against Randolph-Macon at Ashland, Va.

Maryland frosh will figure in two games at home today, meeting Southern High in baseball at 2:30 and Forest Park High in track at 2 o'clock.

From all indications Catholic University will be confronted with a

Grant Gains River Oaks Tennis Final

By the United Press

Houston, Tex., April 19.—Bryan Grant, small bounding Atlanta veteran, today played a defensive game and outwaited second-seeded Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., to win their semifinal match in the annual River Oaks Country Club Tournament.

Grant, playing with a leg injury in the closing games, earned the chance to play for his fourth River Oaks trophy by defeating Cooke, 4—6, 6—2, 7—5, 7—5.

Cooke elected to play Bitsy's waiting game. Both stood far back on the baselines and volleyed, but Cooke's defense broke first.

Grant won the tournament in 1935, 1936 and 1937. In 1938 an appendectomy knocked him out of the meet and last year, he was beaten. Sunday, he will play the winner of the other semifinal match tomorrow between Bobby Riggs, National champion, and Frank Guernsey, of Rice Institute, intercollegiate champion.

Tome Pitchers Ready For Episcopal Game

Port Deposit, Md., April 19.—A week of extra practice, gained when rain forced cancellation of its game last week with Peddie, has put the Tome School's baseball nine in the pink of condition for the opening game with Episcopal High School, of Alexandria, tomorrow.

Three Class D Records Set In Pin Tourney

Three Class D bowling records for the Washington Duckpin Association were established last night by the doubles team, John W. Ydro and Cecil Harp, both of the Christian Endeavor League, as the association's thirtieth annual tournament got under way at Arcadia Alleys.

The records posted were the doubles set of 811 and Harp's high game of 178 and high set of 445. Harp's record-breaking game was sandwiched between marks of 146 and 121. Ydro's set was 366.

In the team rolling Dome Oil, of the Takoma Duckpin Association, leads Class B section with 1,781, headed by Ernie Norwig's 374. The Class C leader is Central, of the Inter-High League, with 1,666, featured by sets of 350 by Bill Streeter and Bob Tucker. Traffic, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, paces Class D with 1,663, while Tabulations, of Railroad Retirement Board League, is out in front in Class E with 1,603. V. Leitch was tops for Tabulations with 352.

Baers Arrive in N. Y.; Open Training Camps

New York, April 19 (AP).—The heavyweight Baer brothers—Max and Buddie—hit town today, and after advising one and all what they were going to do to their respective ring opponents next month, they left for Pompton Lakes, N. J., to open training quarters.

Five Changes In Rules for Pro Football

Field Judge's Station On Field Goal Try Is Most Important

Redskin headquarters here yesterday released an official list of five changes made in National Professional Football League rules at the pro body's recent meeting in New York.

First and foremost, and a change promoted by Redskin heads, was the extra point and field goal shift, which made it mandatory on the part of the field judge to stand directly behind the goal posts during an attempted kick. This, according to its sponsors, would eliminate the possibility of a recurrence of the disputed Bo Russel kick in the New York-Washington game which lost the Eastern title for the 'Skins.

The referee will still call the play, but in the event there is a doubt in his mind, a signal from the field judge will settle matters.

Though the referee will have the same final say on touchdowns, another rule change allowed him to have signals with the field judge and umpire on a close play. This would be particularly helpful during center plunges across the goal line.

A third difference in the 1940 rules will be the cutting down of the clipping penalty from 25 to 15 yards. It was thought referees would be more likely to charge a team with the act if there wasn't such a stiff penalty attached. And in the future the intersection of sidelines and goal line will be marked by a flag on a flexible shaft, another effort to keep officials from making mistakes.

Finally, no distance penalty shall absorb more than half the distance to the goal line. Last year's rule allowed referees to penalize to within an inch of the goal if all the penalty could be exacted, though only half the distance if the fine was more than the distance from the ball to the line.

Feller's Perfect Game Tonic To Seriously Ill Youngster

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 19.—Bob Feller didn't know it then, but his no-hit performance at Chicago Tuesday pitched a sick boy into new enthusiasm for the future. Today, the 21-year-old Cleveland pitcher paid his surprised admirer a hospital room visit.

Paul Hauschulz, jr., 8, son of a Canton, Ohio, postal clerk, suffered a streptococcus throat, a mastoid infection, and spinal meningitis all within a few weeks. He was a sick boy when he heard a radio description of Feller's perfect game, and nurses said it was a better tonic than medicine.

Nurses told Paul unexpectedly today that Feller would visit him in ten minutes. The gleeful boy rehearsed a speech with his mother, but when Feller walked in Paul couldn't speak, and his eyes filled with tears.

Griff Pilot Loser In Argument With Ump Over Gordon's Disputed Homer

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

New York, April 19.—The Yankees unfurled their World Series pennant today and otherwise reminded the Nats that they are the baseball champions of the universe. The score: New York, 5; Washington, 3.

Amid the Nats' indignant cries of "Foul!" the Yankees staged a four-run demonstration in the first inning to the delight of the 15,299 opening-day customers. When Umpire Joe Rue ruled Joe Gordon's drive into the upper tier of leftfield a fair ball, it set off a 10-minute uproar among the Washington athletes.

Manager Bucky Harris led the protests with such vehemence that Mr. Rue thumbed him out of the ball game despite the fact that it was scarcely 10 minutes old.

Hollingsworth Stars

The Nats never did recover from that four-run uprising in the first inning against Ken Chase. Al Hollingsworth kept Washington in the ball game and himself in the big leagues with a brilliant 7⅓-inning relief shift but the Nats never approached any closer than a run behind the Yanks.

Hollingsworth, aware that he is on 30-day trial with the Nats who accepted him a bit grudgingly last week in the deal with Brooklyn that sent Catcher Angelo Giuliani to the Dodgers, pitched himself definitely onto the Washington staff today.

The big left-hander took over Chase's job in the second inning at a time when the bases were full of Yankees and two balls recorded against Charley Keller, and then gave the Yanks a horrible time of it. For the remainder of the game he allowed only three hits, and the only run he surrendered spawned from two errors in the eighth inning.

Gomez Retires

In defeat the Nats were an improved ball club (1) because they scored some runs for the first time this season, and (2) because they made as many as seven hits. Lefty Gomez yielded four of the hits and one of the Washington runs before he retired at the end of the fifth inning with a lame back. Steve Sundra took over from that point.

Mayor LaGuardia had scarcely returned to his field box after officiating at the flag-raising ceremonies in centerfield, when the Yankees went on their first-inning rampage. Before Ken Chase could get anybody out, the bases were full of Yanks.

Chase's first act was to walk Frank Crosetti and then he pitched a single to Rolfe. Selkirk beat out a bunt down the third base line to burden the bases. The next development produced one Washington error and two Yankee runs. Jimmy Bloodworth grabbed Charley Keller's hot grounder, tagged out Selkirk on the base lines and then threw wild past first base in an attempt for a double play, Rolfe following Crosetti across the plate.

Dispute Arises

Two were out and one on base when Gordon arrived at bat to precipitate the first-inning uproar. He smashed one of Chase's pitches into the upper deck in left perilously close to the foul line and when Umpire Rue waved both Bill Dickey and Gordon around the bases, Harris led a mass charge against him. Washington players streamed from the dugout and their positions on the field and upbraided Rue, who compromised by reiterating that the ball was fair.

He made it more emphatic by ordering Harris out of the game and Coach Clyde Milan took over the direction of the Washington team.

Chase survived that first inning, but when he started inviting more trouble after two were out in the second, he got the hook. He pitched singles to Crosetti and Rolfe, and walked Selkirk on four straight balls to load the bases. After he pitched two balls to Keller, Milan sent for Hollingsworth who met that crisis by causing Keller to ground out on his first pitch.

Thereafter Hollingsworth was magnificent, permitting only one Yank to reach second base until the

Jamaica Will Introduce New Purse

Bimelech Remains Unknown Quantity; Roman and Chattel Entered at Keeneland

By the Associated Press

New York, April 19.—The 3-year-olds, rounding into form after their winter lazing, tomorrow begin final tuning-up for the rich stakes ahead by testing their legs at distances varying from six furlongs to a mile and one-sixteenth.

Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont candidates are reporting for action on virtually all tracks, and from this set of races you're going to get a pretty good line on just what's hat. Few among the top Derby hopefuls are missing from the entry lists, and of these few only Big Boy Bimelech, who has not yet come back to the races, remains an unknown 3-year-old quantity.

Along with the outings for Derby candidates, Jamaica, Havre de Grace and Keeneland also put on companion features for older horses as the eastern racing season hits its first big Saturday.

Chesapeake Stakes Tops Races

Topping the attractions is the mile-and-sixteenth Chesapeake Handicap at Havre, in which Andy K., rated second-best of the 2-year-olds of 1939, and Fenelon, Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons' chief hope for his fourth Derby triumph, hook up. Each won his first 3-year-old start during the past week, coming home, in each case, in a six-furlong allowance without much trouble.

Another Derby candidate, Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Jacomar, tops the field in the 6-furlong Lansdowne handicap, second part of the Havre double-header, although this son of Jack High figures to have his work cut out for him against such older fellows as Speed to Spare and Night Tide.

Jamaica is trying something new in the 6-furlong experimental handicap, in which Sonny Whitney's Derby hope, Flight Command; Jock Whitney's Flaming Stakes winner, Woof Woof; Mrs. Parker Corving's Straight Lead and Russell Firestone's Marogay look the best of a field of eight. The weights carried by the entries in this field—with Flight Command packing the biggest load at 121 pounds—were assigned by Handicapper John B. Campbell off their 2-year-old form.

Sun Pharos in Allowance

J. B. Partridge's Devil's Crag and Mrs. A. Pelleteri's Sun Pharos, also Derby candidates, run in a mile and 70 yards allowance on the same program, while Mrs. Payne Whitney's Day Off tops a field of six entered in the 1 1-16 miles Laurelton Handicap for older steppers.

Joseph E. Widener's Roman and Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' mud-running Chattel, both headed for the Derby, appear the class of a field of four in a three-quarter sprint at Keeneland for 3-year-olds, while Warren Wright's entry of Easy Mon and Count Morse and Mrs. Whitney's pair of Armor Bearer and Equilibrium, all older horses, look the best in the mile and a sixteenth Ben Ali Handicap, heading the card.

This $2,500 Twin Peaks Handicap at a mile and 70 yards features the Tanforan program, with more Derby gallopers going to the post.

Royal Crusader, well-liked colt from W. H. Hoffman's R-C Stable, and W. C. Stroube's Exarch are in this field.

At Narragansett, the $5,000 added Spring Handicap heads the program, with 11 horses entered for the sprint. W. F. Mannagh's 5-year-old Liberty Flight will carry top-weight of 122 pounds. Bill Farnsworth, who ran a disappointing race in his first out here earlier this week; Mrs. C. C. Winters' Night Editor and Mrs. Emil Denemark's entry of Court Dance and Prairie Dog are other well-liked candidates.

Horses to Watch In Maryland

GARDEN GAL—Showed a good effort in her last start, and will beat a cheap field of youngsters.

ROUGH BISCUIT—This one won for $1,500 last out, and is capable of beating better ones.

LIKELY LAD—A speed horse that was in front for $3,000 only to finish out of money. Will stick it out in near future.

ABRASION—Should have beaten Wood Chopper in last start. Should take the measure of some good ones.

ODDESA FRANK—Stopped in stretch in that last heat but will be tough to beat in next outing.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

George Cook reports that there's a brand-new filly on his farm out in Howard County. The young lady drew her first breath yesterday and is by Pilate out of Dreamy Isle. A strapping filly and the first ever foaled on that farm. "Papy" Witmer, likable jockey, has reported and is rarin' to get to Charles Town. He accepted his first mount here Thursday. Word has been received at Pimlico that Charles S. Howard's Mioland and Kayak II are en route East from the West Coast. Mioland is considered a definite starter in the Kentucky Derby while Kayak II is headed for the $20,000 added Dixie Handicap at Pimlico. New York is calling all platers.

The fields up there have been small. Horses, the property of Frank Kearns and Howard Bruce were shipped out yesterday morning. The Greentree Stable's Red Dock was not entered in the Chesapeake today because of the promise of a heavy track. The Woodlawn vase, presented annually by the Maryland Jockey Club to the winner of the Preakness Stakes, has become the permanent trophy for the race only through the courtesy and sportsmanship of successive owners to whom a Preakness victory has brought the vase. When the trophy was first turned over to the Maryland Jockey Club, it was with the expressed idea that the winning owner should have the privilege of naming the track and the distance of the next contest. But successive winners, eager to see the Preakness trophy retain permanent identity with the Maryland Jockey Club feature, have willingly returned it into the custody of the club to be perpetuated as a lasting symbol of Preakness fame.

For the winner's personal collection the Maryland Jockey Club now awards a small silver model of the Woodlawn Vase which becomes the owner's permanent possession. This year to commemorate the Preakness' golden jubilee, the model will be wrought in gold. Only two winners of the Preakness Stakes have become custodians of the Woodland Vase more than twice; H. P. Whitney with victories in 1921, 1927 and 1928, and W. J. Salmon, winner in 1923, 1926 and 1929. Two-time custodians are E. R. Bradley, Belair Stud and Glen Riddle Farm, and in all the celebrated trophy has been entrusted to the care of 17 different winners. With the stables of H. P. Whitney and W. J. Salmon no longer in the running for Preakness honors, both E. R. Bradley and Belair Stud now stand a good chance of tying the record for custodians of the Woodlawn Vase. Confucius say: Heleno will take the dough.

BILL.

Last race—Blue Twink was credited as being one of the good 2-year-olds of the Florida season. With the exception of Zacharias he meets mediocre competition in today's affair. The latter horse rates only second best after a poor effort at Bowie last start. Becomely has speed enough to garner the small end of the purse.

Second race—Quaker Brass, making his first start of the season last week, finished second in a classier field of maidens. With that race under his belt, he should be ready for the question today. The W. L. Ranch entry of Kantan and Marching Sir looms as the most serious contention. Zayin has a good money chance.

Third race—Dark Friend has shown liking in the muddy going on this track on previous occasions and though his form chart is none too reassuring, he should be counted on for an above-average race. Apprehend will be the one to beat on the merits of good races at Bowie. Dorothy Pomp could win it if in her best form, but late races have been dull.

Fourth race—Rawson has sported with competition of this caliber in two previous outings at Bowie and considering track conditions receives top figure. Affair probably needed his recent race and is expected to provide strong opposition. Robespierre has been working well over this strip and might be a contender.

Fifth race—Andy K. was driven out to win in his seasonal bow this week, but his time in that race was good over an off track and the Derby candidate can be expected to improve over that effort. Fenelon was shipped down from New York for this race after defeating Carrier Pigeon on opening day at Jamaica. Royal Man forced the top horse to a drive to win last start and will be dangerous.

Sixth race—Speed to Spare appears well placed in this event. There will be little early speed to force his early pace and the veteran sprinter should last, to earn the verdict. Heleno received strong support in the betting, when finishing second to General Mowlee and might be the one to upset the dope here. Supreme Sir should be up for the small end of the purse.

Seventh race—Howard has won his last two heats in creditable time over the Bowie course and appears capable of repeating again. He will like the distance of this race. Zevson drops from allowance to cheap claiming and we suspect his underpinning might be unsound. Room Service merits a good chance after running second to Greedan last start.

Best bet—Quaker Brass.

Jockey Wall Injured as Horse Falls

Ace Rider Narrowly Misses Death in First Race Mishap

sal entry, were judged in a dead heat for second place. Bright Arc, which many of the fans believed had finished second, was shunted back to fourth.

The stewards cleared up the mystery of the objection by saying that they had ordered the signal due to Wall's mishap. There was no claim of foul by any of the riders.

The program was conducted under frowning skies and over a track deep in mud. Some 6,500 customers, mostly of the regular variety, reported to participate in the bangtail business.

Those who played the "9 and 3" combination, starting with Bright Harvest and ending with Mrs. J. Yancey Christmas' Izarra, collected $160. Izarra, a son of Stimulus, came from behind to defeat Marin, the heavily played favorite. Dona's Pal was a distant third. Only seven started in the 6-furlong affair.

The program lacked a feature race with the fourth event perhaps the best of the lot. Grand Pageant made a parade out of this sprint of three-quarters of a mile. Apprentice Jockey H. Lemmons took the daughter of Supreme to the top as soon as the gates opened and she stayed there, holding a daylight lead at the end. Greeny, owned by Gustave Ring, of Washington, came from far back to beat Argella out of second money. Grand Pageant paid $16.90.

The horses were plowing through the deep track throughout the program. A new high for time at the meeting came in the third race when Giggle Lee, the favorite, won in 1:18 for 6 furlongs.

Schley Buck, of half-mile fame, was a driving winner in the seventh race while carrying the colors of Mrs. A. S. Bowman. The son of Canter ran in front with Dinamita and took a brief lead which he held to the end under the pressure of Apprentice Jockey Lemmons' whip. Dinamita finished second and Bounding Count was third. The winner paid $39.30.

A photo finish gave Good Reception, a longshot, the victory over Busy Fingers, the favorite, in the sixth race. Apprentice S. Clark, who rode Busy Fingers, lodged a claim of foul against the winner but the stewards refused to allow it. Minorca was third. Good Reception paid $17.10.

Dodgers Bury Giants, 12-0, Before 24,741 Whooping Fans

6-Run Attack In 8th Caps Field Day

Hugh Casey Limits Arch Foes to 9 Hits; Brooklyn Hitters Get 12 Safeties, 7 Walks

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, April 19.—The venomous Dodgers slaughtered the New York Giants, 12 to 0, today to give a whooping, booing crowd of 24,741 Flatbush fans an opening day thrill of practically pennant proportions.

Hugh Casey allowed nine hits in steering Brooklyn to its second straight shutout, but kept them well scattered and was seldom in danger of being scored upon and never threatened with losing.

The Dodgers simply steamrollered their arch enemies from across town, scoring one run in each of the fourth, fifth and sixth innings, three in the seventh and giving a grand fireworks display of six runs in the eighth when they batted around and the Giants fell to pieces.

None of the 12 hits the Dodgers corralled off Hal Schumacher and Cliff Melton were for more than two bases, but linked with seven bases on balls and other gifts they didn't need to be.

In their big inning the Dodgers loaded the bases on two walks and a single before Pete Coscarart singled one run across. Then Gus Mancusco singled for two more, two passes forced in a run and Harry Danning threw wild to let in another pair.

A double by Cookie Lavagetto with the bases loaded accounted for the three tallies off Melton in the seventh.

Tribe's Allen Shuts Out Tigers, 4-0

3 Run Homer by Heath In 6th Accounts For Second Victory

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 19.—Johnny Allen and Jeff Heath sprinted down the comeback trail today to hand the Cleveland Indians a 4-to-0 shutout over the Detroit Tigers.

Allen, who won only nine games last campaign after an arm operation, turned in an impressive three-hit pitching performance. Outfielder Heath, who slumped to a batting mark of .292 in 1939 after a fat .343 his first season, connected for a three-run homer.

Heath's long sixth-inning drive off Henry Pippen went into the right field stands of Cleveland Stadium, where 26,529 spectators shivered in temperatures in the low forties to see the Indians open their home season. Ben Chapman and Hal Trosky scored ahead of Heath. Chapman had doubled to send Lou Boudreau in with the first run.

The Tigers' three blows were harmless singles.

Since Bob Feller pitched no-hit ball against the Chicago White Sox in the Tribe's only other contest, Cleveland foes have obtained just three hits in 18 innings.

Rocksie Wins Feature Of Hampton Program

Margaret Cotter's Ace Takes First Place In Knock-Down-and Out Class After Jumpoff With Sanoj; Village Miss Takes 3 Events

By the Associated Press

Hampton, Va., April 19.—With three horses sharing the major honors by taking two first places apiece, the first day's program of the Hampton Horse Show was completed in Darling Memorial Park here today despite intermittent rain during the afternoon.

The show was halted for a period of about 20 minutes just after the completion of the three-gaited saddle event by a driving rainstorm, but was continued shortly after the downpour slackened.

Village Miss, owned by Senator and Mrs. Robert W. Daniel, of Brandon, took first honors in the ladies' hunter class for the Howard W. Saunders, jr., Memorial Trophy, and also won the thoroughbred hunters event. Brandon's Pride, owned by Miss Margery Daniel, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Daniel, also took two victories, in the Tidewater working hunters class and in the green hunters event.

One of the entries of Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Upperville, Missing Caddie, took two blue ribbons, winning in the model hunters class and in the hunters under saddle event.

The feature of the day was the knock-down-and-out class, the final event scheduled for this afternoon. Rocksie, owned and ridden by Margaret Cotter, of Washington, won a jump-off from Sanjo, fiery black gelding owned by Harry Jonas, of Richmond, and ridden by Billy Friedhof.

Attracting the principal share of interest during the morning was the five-gaited saddle class, which was captured by May Queen, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Browne, of Baltimore, and ridden by Mr. Brown. Good Friday, owned by the Rose Hill Farms, of Washington, won the first honors in the touch-and-out class, which wound up the morning session of the program.

9,029 Chilly Fans See Larry French Pitch Good Ball

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 19.—The Chicago Cubs opened their home season today with a 5-to-0 shutout victory over the St. Louis Cardinals before a shivering crowd of 9,029 in 41-degree weather.

Larry French tossed airtight ball all the way, giving up six hits, including two doubles.

Rookie Bob Sturgeon, despite two errors at shortstop, was the Cub spark, getting a double and two singles off Morton Cooper and his successor, Jack Russell.

Manager Gabby Hartnett turned the catching chores for the day over to Al Todd and remained out of sight until the eighth inning, when he went out to speak his mind to Umpire Ziggy Sears on a ball called on Batter Johnny Mize. French began the protest and Hartnett picked it up, finally becoming so stubborn in his argument that Sears sent him to the showers.

Pepper Martin enlivened the proceedings in the second inning when he ran in from leftfield and forced out French at third after muffing Billy Herman's short fly. He beat French to the bag by about 3 feet. In the next inning Third Baseman Jimmy Brown was credited with a putout at second base on a rundown that produced a double play.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald
Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Again this season, The Washington Post and Station WJSV conducts The Man of the Month contest to determine the Nats' most valuable players for each month. Following each game, Arch McDonald will distribute points to the Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Post will reward each winner of the Man of the Month contest with a $50 merchandise order.

Pitcher Al Hollingsworth, the Brooklyn Dodger's castoff, whom the Nats accepted on 30-day trial, yesterday projected himself squarely into the fight for the first Man of the Month award.

To Hollingsworth, five points, because after relieving Ken Chase in the second inning he held the vaunted batting attack of the Yankees to three hits in 6 1-3 innings, allowed no runs, and fanned five.

The remaining five points are distributed between Rick Ferrell and Cecil Travis. To Travis, three points, because he made two singles in three trips to the plate, and scored the Nats' first two runs. To Ferrell, two points, because although he made only one hit in four tries, he drove in two runs.

Virginia Setter Wins Loudoun Trials

Special Dispatch to The Post

Round Hill, Va., April 19.—Beau Essig, a white and black setter dog, owned and handled by Virgil P. Hawse, of Staunton, Va., repeated his victory of last fall and again won the All-Age Stake in the spring field trials of the Loudoun Gun Dog Club, which came to a close today on the J. D. Thomas farm, near Round Hill. He thus becomes the first dog to win the stake in two successive meets.

Heavy fogs and rain have prevailed all during the trials which began on Wednesday morning and were scheduled to be completed on Thursday evening, but several delays postponed the finish until 4:30 p. m. today.

Beau Essig, by Florendale Lou's Beau, made three finds in the bird field and handled them perfectly. His style was good and he did his work so impressively in his initial performance that it was not necessary to call him back for a second series.

Second honors in the field of 30 of Winchester were won by Betsy of Carrodoc, a white, black and ticked setter bitch, owned by Jack Harper, of Leesburg and Chevy Chase, Md., and handled by Herman F. Smith, of Salem, Va. Harper also had a second place dog in the Members' Shooting Stake today, when his Skipper of Carrodoc captured second honors.

Third place in the All-Age Stake went to Sport's Peerless Beaupride, a setter dog, owned by M. H. Simmons, of Milroy, Pa., and handled by R. E. Christian, of Deerfield, Md.

The Memoers' Shooting Dog Stake, last on the program, was won by Scrappy's Image, a white and orange setter dog, owned by W. B. Strickley, of Roanoke, and handled by Herman F. Smith. This dog ran a wide searching race, which was climaxed by finds in the bird field. Third place in this stake was captured by Rex's Star, a white and liver pointer bitch, owned and handled by Curtis Marcey, of Vaucluse, Va., and Benton Snider,

Weather Stops Women's Golf

The women golfers are going to start turning in expense accounts to the weather man for mileage to and from the team match sites.

For the third time in eight days, the Women's D. C. Golf Association team matches were postponed on account of rain. Yesterday the first teams gathered at Woodmont and the second and third at Washington Golf and Country. Some were already to start, others waited in the locker rooms with rain jackets and rubbers, but at 9:30 the courses were declared unfit for play.

The entire second and third teams were on hand, while at Woodmont the committee caught some of the first team members before they left home.

A week ago yesterday, the first series of matches was postponed at Argyle and Chevy Chase. Last Wednesday they were rescheduled but postponed again as the rain continued. Yesterday the second set of matches was scheduled, according to the book.

The situation now is that the first set will be played Monday at Argyle and Chevy Chase, weather permitting. The second set has been postponed to Friday, May 27, at Woodmont and Washington.

Matches started at the same date last year, April 12, and the schedule was completed without a single postponement. However, the unseasonal rains this year have suggested to a few of the committee members that the opening day be set back until April 25 next year.

D. C. Feather Fight Champ Decisions Morris in Feature

Gilbert Mayo, District Golden Gloves featherweight champion, won what may be his last amateur fight last night by decisioning Bernie Morris, unattached, at Lyceum Hall, Alexandria.

Mayo, who represented St. Mary's, the host club, has announced he will turn pro in the near future. Jimmy Erwin, promoter at Riverside Stadium, attended the bouts.

In the semifinal, Carl Steele, St. Mary's, scored a technical knockout over Bob Brodigan, Pete's A. C., when Referee Ray Bowen refused to let the latter answer the second-round bell because of a cut lip. The boys fought at 135 pounds.

Other results:

Norbert O'Leary, Police Boys' No. 4, decisioned Al Horton, St. Mary's, 115 pounds.

Francis Smith, St. Mary's, decisioned Joey Harp, Pete's A. C., 126 pounds.

Yanks Beat Nats In New York, 5-3

eighth when a Yankee run scored despite the absence of a Yankee hit

In the second inning the Nats made motions as if to get back in the ball game when Travis singled to center and Gomez filled the bases with none out by walking Bloodworth and Pofahl. Ferrell drove a long fly to right to produce the first Washington run of the season, but Chase and Case obligingly struck out.

Against Sundra in the sixth the Nats again made threatening gestures, but were forced to settle for one run. Travis walked and Bloodworth singled to center, but Pofahl, Ferrell and Hollingsworth hit into infield outs that produced only a single tally.

In the eighth the Nats were strong on the scent of a tie while trailing, 4-2, Gerry Walker, first up lashed a triple against the left-field wall and Travis followed with a grounder that took a freak hop over Crosetti's shoulder for a single that scored Walker. With Travis representing the tying run, however, Bloodworth tapped to the pitcher and Pofahl and Ferrell hoisted harmless flies.

Hollingsworth was completely blameless in the Yankee run in the eighth. First off, Bloodworth fumbled Henrich's grounder, and a bit later, when Hollingsworth attempted to start a double play with a throw to second, Pofahl relayed the ball 10 yards over Wasdell's head to present the Yanks with a gift run.

one-man opposition when it seeks its second consecutive track victory in the meet with William and Mary.

Star of the invaders is Johnny Brown, who compiled the amazing total of 30 points earlier this week in a meet against Randolph-Macon, winning the 120-yard high hurdles, the high jump, javelin, broad jump, discus and pole vault.

Dashman Also a Threat

Another William and Mary performer who is certain to prove troublesome to Dorsey Griffith's Cardinal forces is Sprinter Tommy Lawson, whose times in the 100 and 220 the other day were far superior to anything C. U.'s dashmen have done. Lawson zipped the century in 10 seconds flat and covered the 220 in 23.5. Thus far Roger Cooper, C. U.'s standout sprinter, hasn't been under 10.6 for the 100.

This meet and Maryland's engagement with Rutgers will be the two local schools' final tune-ups for the Penn Relays at Philadelphia Friday and Saturday.

The sailing race among Georgetown, George Washington and Penn State will be the first of a series expected to attract top-notch collegiate oarsmen here this season. All three teams will use Cape Cod dinghys which will be exchanged after each race.

As neither the Colonials nor the Hoyas have participated in competition this year little is known of their ability but from all reports both are capable of holding their own with the invading Lions.

A squad of 34 Georgetown gridmen will make the trip to Emmittsburg for a scrimmage which will give the Hilltop eleven its first taste this spring of outside competition and afford Coach Jack Hagerty an opportunity to study under fire several freshmen who have shown promise. In this group are Fullback Bill McLaughlin, Quarterback Jack Gardiner and End Chris Pavich.

G. W. Forest Streams Stocked With Fish

Harrisonburg, Va., April 19 (AP).—M. C. Hovard, supervisor of the George Washington National Forest, said today the forest service had stocked some 300 miles of open trout water in the forest area with 31,000 trout and the State Game Commission approximately 80,000—giving the fisherman 366 chances per mile of landing a trout.

A special National Forest permit stamp is necessary for anyone wishing to fish in the National Forest streams.

The cards and the bidding are shown in today's box. McPherran's partner was L. H. Fremont. After finding a bad trump break, Mrs. Folline stripped McPherran's hand, threw him in with a trump and compelled him to play a suit which she could ruff in her hand while discarding in dummy.

Fremont led the ace of clubs and shifted to a diamond, which Mrs. Folline won with the king. She laid down the ace of spades and the bad distribution showed up. She entered dummy with the club king and cashed the ace of diamonds, discarding a heart from her hand. She ruffed dummy's last diamond in her hand; then she played the ace and king of hearts and led a trump to McPherran. Stripped to diamonds and a spade honor, he was powerless to save the defense. He took his king of spades but then was forced to lead a diamond for Mrs. Folline to trump in her hand while discarding a heart in dummy.

She made four spades, losing two spades and a club.

Only one other declarer bid and made four spades on the deal.

$211,000 Contracts Signed for Airport

Contracts for paving runways, taxiways and aprons at National Airport, Gravelly Point, at a cost of $211,000, were signed yesterday by Clinton M. Hester, Civil Aeronautics Authority administrator.

The work was awarded to Warren Bros., Boston. Covering the equivalent of 50 miles of 20-foot roadway, it was said to be the largest single paving contract ever let.

District Sales Of Insurance Off Slightly

Virginia Leads Area, Research Report For U. S. Discloses

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Local life insurance sales last month amounted to $5,031,000, marking a 5 per cent decline from March, 1939, according to Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, of Hartford, Conn. In February, sales here were within 1 per cent of the total new business for February, 1939.

March sales brought the total for the first quarter of 1940 to $14,326,000, a decrease of 17 per cent from the like period a year ago. Most of this recession was experienced in January, a 34 per cent drop, due to the fact that an unusual volume of business was paid for in January, 1939, just prior to rate increases by many companies.

Washington's decline for March compares with a national average decrease of 2 per cent on a total volume of $567,872,000. The average for the country was also ahead of the Capital, in the first quarter, new policies amounting to $1,591,708,000, a decrease of 14 per cent.

Virginia Among Leaders

Virginia gave the best return in March of any State in this territory, new policies totaling $8,537,000, a rise of 12 per cent over March, 1939. In the first three months of the present year, Virginia policies amounted to $21,924,000, or 12 per cent under the first quarter in 1939.

Maryland reported March sales of $8,053,000, or 1 per cent under the 1939 figure. In the first quarter, Maryland agents sold $22,867,000 new business, 11 per cent under last year. In North Carolina, sales totaled $8,082,000 in March, or 4 per cent off, while South Carolina gained 8 per cent on a volume of $3,816,000. West Virginia advanced 2 per cent in March business which amounted to $4,681,000, sales in the first quarter reaching a total of $13,838,000, or within 1 per cent of the 1939 mark.

Home Mortgages Decline

Home mortgages in the District of Columbia accepted for insurance by the Federal Housing Administration during February showed a slight decline from the amount involved in similar ones a year ago. Mortgages accepted for insurance in February, 1939, numbered 37 and amounted to $203,600, while in February this year they were 33, totaling $189,600. In the first two months of 1939 these mortgages numbered 71 in Washington and amounted to $413,700 the FHA reports. In January of this year 38 mortgages were accepted, involving $224,100.

Maryland reported a large increase over last year. In 1939, mortgages accepted numbered 96 and totaled $457,000, while in February, 1940, they totaled 185 and involved $773,900, making a total for the two months this year of 314 mortgages, valued at $1,348,100.

Virginia revealed a gain. A year ago, 134 mortgages were accepted for the total of $628,800, while in February, 1940, the number was 139 and the amount $669,700. In the first two months of the present year the total reached 278 and the volume $1,331,000.

87.3 Per Cent on New Homes

FHA reported recently that in the District of Columbia mortgages accepted for insurance in the full year 1939 totaled 488 on new homes, amounting to $2,543,000, and numbered 50 on existing homes, involving $367,300, the figures revealing that 87.3 per cent of the mortgages were on new homes.

Aetna Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn., announces that H. Cochran Fisher and Freeman N. Stricklin, of the P. D. War in Scandinavia May Be Boon to Dixie By Increasing Domestic Paper Supplies

Here is a typical forest of Southern slash pine, which may be increasingly developed as war in Scandinavia cuts off normal sources for pulp and paper

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
International News Service Staff Writer.

The extension of the war to Scandinavia has a bearing on the trend toward industrialization of Dixie.

Specifically, the threatened cutting off of supplies of newsprint and wood pulp from Norway and Sweden is likely to shift orders to American and Canadian paper mills. This comes at a time when experimental paper mills, using Southern pine instead of spruce have been opened in the South.

The late Dr. Charles H. Herty, in seeking to free Georgia and the rest of Dixie from undue dependence on King Cotton, did the pioneering scientific work in demonstrating the availability of Southern pine for paper. In this vision he was supported financially and otherwise by the late Francis H. Garvan, head of the Chemical Foundation, who dreamed of a more nearly self-contained Nation. The latter's dream is being further espoused by the National Chemurgic Council.

In addition to these innovations, the South ever since World War No. 1 has been going through a significant trend toward industrialization. As a result of the development of infant industries below the Mason and Dixon Line, the hitherto free trade area has been increasingly sensing the need for protection.

Curiously enough, the change was synchronized with a tendency of bankers, foreign traders and others in the hitherto protectionist North to question whether the historic high-tariff policy was still indicated for a "creditor" Nation. Thus economic changes under the surface have been laying the foundations for a shift in the traditional sectional line-ups.

Up to now, the persistence of the one-party concept in the South on account of racial considerations has beclouded the under-surface reversal of economic interests.

In the last six years the present Democratic Administration has been subtly reducing tariff rates in all directions through executive flat under the so-called reciprocal tariff discretionary powers, which have been renewed for another three years.

The State engineering experiment station has been set up in Atlanta by the Georgia School of Technology to use research to find new means of diversifying the economic activities in Georgia and in the South generally.

A dispassionate survey of the natural resources of the South indicates that Dixie, instead of being the Nation's number one economic problem, may in fact be the section of biggest promise for the future. The South will come into its own when it promotes the productivity and remuneration of its own workers, so that a larger ratio of the output of the district may be consumed within its own boundaries, instead of being shipped elsewhere.

War in North May Increase U. S. Iron Sales

Swedish Ore Yields One-Eighth England's Necessary Supplies

New York, April 19.—Renewed interest in the export of pig iron from the United States raises the question whether the further disruption of normal trade in Europe by the extension of war to the North will result in increased exports from the United States, advises Fitch's Investors Service.

Not only pig iron but all forms of iron and steel, including scrap, may be involved, in further changes in foreign trade. Some classes of export business may be lost, especially those to the northern countries of Europe, and at the same time certain imports probably will be cut off or diminished, including Norwegian ferroalloys and iron ore from both Norway and Sweden.

Important to Britain

Not only has Germany been dependent in large measure on iron ore from Sweden, but this ore has been an important raw material for British furnaces also. With Hitler's soldiers in control of the railroads connectig Swedish mines with the Norwegian coast, England is cut off from one of its highest grade ore supplies. On the other hand with the Gulf of Bothnia thawing out, Germany will not be dependent again for many months on ore shipped out of Narvik.

Britain's imports of Swedish ore have run around 1,600,000 tons a year, and as Swedish ore has an iron content as high as 60 to 70 per cent, this would mean close to 1,000,000 tons of pig iron. This sum is equal to around one-eighth of average annual United Kingdom production of pig iron in recent years.

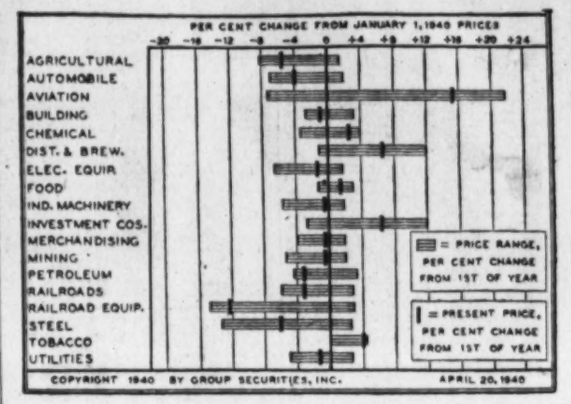
A disruption of iron supplies in Great Britain from one source this year would not be a major threat to the nation's war industries, and yet it would create a serious situation for the time being.

Effect On U. S. Uncertain

The bulk of her iron ore is mined at home, but supplementary supplies are gathered from various parts of the world.

Iron ore could be shipped in additional quantitities from various places on this side of the Atlantic, but, in view of a scarcity of bottoms, this seems less likely than the shipment of additional pig iron, or steel, or both. The extent to which any of these considerations may become an actuality is wholly a matter of speculation so far as exports from the United States are concerned, but it is evident that important readjustments in world trade relating to war's prime material are necessarily under way.

How Stock Groups Are Acting



The Market

By C. Norman Stabler
A Special Correspondent.

Shipping, Paper and Woolen Shares Gain; Unsettlement Prevails in List as a Whole; Specialty, Motor Losses Offset Other Advances

New York, April 19.—Shipping, paper and woolen shares continued today on the crest of speculative buying stimulated by expectations that these groups will benefit from various aspects and effects of war.

For the share list as a whole, however, unsettlement prevailed. The 100 stocks were off 0.11 point at the close with losses in manufacturing specialties, food and motor groups more than offsetting slight improvement in steels and coppers.

Foreign exchange rates were little changed from the previous day.

Loft Weakness Disturbs

Acute weakness in Loft on large volume was a disturbing factor to the speculative crowd. The shares were off 5½ points at the low of the day, but recovered later for a net loss of 3 on turnover of 83,500 shares. Dealings and gyrations suggested that stop loss orders may have been touched off in the precipitate early dip.

Special weakness developed in Continental Baking preferred, which was one of 62 Big Board issues to establish a new low. It sold at 86, recovered a point and closed with a net loss of 5¼. Johns-Manville made a new low at 67, but finished at 68.

Chain store issues, many of which were in new low ground, were affected by spotty trade reports as well as by current fears of adverse legislative developments for this particular industry.

Shipping Stocks Rise

The shipping and shipbuilding stocks continued their upward swing. Atlantic Gulf & West Indies issues and American Hawaiian Steamship were at new highs, the former advancing 3⅜ and joining the 15 more active issues. New York Shipbuilding was ahead 1¾. International Paper issues kept in the spotlight, the common going up ¾. Steel common firmed half a point in a dull but steady steel group and Bethlehem was up a small fraction.

Aircrafts ran into profit taking after early advances and the group ended about even.

Italian Bonds Strong

Declines continued today in the foreign section of the listed bond market owing to the unsettled international situation and the danger of further encroachments on neutral nations. Italian bonds were about the only important strong point, and the improvement in such issues plainly resulted from the more pacific tone of the Italian press. Domestic issues were quiet and irregular. Turnover amounted to $5,740,000.

Norwegian and Danish bonds dropped 2 to 5 points, and in some instances have attained virtual default levels. Belgians were soft, while Italians advanced around 2 points. Yugoslav bonds fell to fresh lows. The Japanese group continued its decline, as did the bonds of the great belligerents.

United States Treasury obligations sold off about ⅛ to ⅜ point, but there was no great selling pressure. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were marked fractionally lower.

Dutch Indies Increase Arms Buying in U. S.

$439,868 Licensed In March; Allied Purchasers Lower

By the Associated Press

The Dutch East Indies, which have heard the echoes of Europe's war, obtained licenses during March to export $439,868 worth of war materials from the United States.

The State Department, releasing export figures today, said the Indies' applications in March ran their first-quarter total to $830,701.

Norway, now an Anglo-German battlefield, obtained delivery of $1,053,321 worth of war supplies, virtually all airplanes, during the month.

Great Britain and France, which appeared to have been holding back until they were permitted to buy new airplane types just now released for export, slacked off sharply in their March applications.

In March, France obtained export licenses for only $546,145 of war materials, and Great Britain for $2,224,221.

This was partly balanced, however, by large totals for licenses to the British dominions, particularly Canada, which received licenses during the month valued at $15,765,915—almost entirely for war planes.

Of the other British dominions, Australia received licenses for $1,647,877, and New Zealand for $1,916,870.

China continued her renewed policy of placing war orders here, obtaining licenses for $3,149,346, making a total for the first three months of the year of $7,274,690.

The total of licenses granted in March was $27,016,887. Much below the average set in the first two months, the total licenses issued in the first quarter were for $170,125,821.

France obtained actual delivery of war equipment in March of $11,883,054, and Great Britain $594,958.

Sweden obtained arms licenses totaling $587,771—a total for the quarter of $2,047,809.

Total actual exports of war supplies in March were $17,481,990, bringing the total for the first quarter to $61,041,791.

Industry Hears Equipment Needs

Chicago, April 19.—American manufacturing plants must double the rate at which they have been junking old equipment and replacing it with new, if they are to be able to meet foreign competition after this war is over. For the last five years, American manufacturers of production machinery have been putting foreign competitors into a position to run us out of foreign markets for manufactured goods after the war is over, declared John H. Van Deventer, president and editor of the Iron Age, at the luncheon meeting of the Midwest Regional Conference of the National Industrial Advertisers Association at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, today.

As a result of their heavy buying of the latest American machine tools and other equipment in the past five years in preparation for war, the leading overseas nations now have first-class manufacturing capacity far beyond their normal peace-time production requirements.

Eastman Hires 72 Pct. More Than in 1929

By the Associated Press

Rochester, N. Y., April 18.—Eastman Kodak Co., in an illustrated report to stockholders today, disclosed for 1939 72 per cent greater employment than in the predepression high of 1929 and a net profit within a half million dollars of the company's all-time record, also set in 1929.

At the end of 1939 the company's personnel numbered 27,000, compared to 15,700 employed in 1929. The pay roll last year, the report stated, was $19,300,000 over the 1929 figure.

Net 1939 profits of the company and wholly owned subsidiaries were $21,537,577, equal to $8.55 per common share compared with $17,339,408 or $7.54 per share in 1938.

This compared with a net profit of $6,058,479 in 1932 and a net profit of $22,014,916 in 1929, highest in the history of the company.

"At the low point of the depression, in 1932," the report stated, "the decline from 1929 in the average number of employes was 16 per cent, which compares with 37 per cent for the country as a whole.

"During the next six years, kodak employment more than doubled."

Employment increase was attributed in the report to reduction of the normal work week from 48 to 40 hours, expanding sales stimulated by improvement of products, introduction of new products, lower prices and improved service.

Along with the employment increase has come a steady decline in the prices of the company's products, the report stated.

Business Taps Capital Market For New Funds

By the Associated Press

New York, April 19.—Private corporations tapped the capital markets this week for the second largest amount of new money since last July, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

Public offerings of new securities during the week ended yesterday declined to $51,094,087, but 56 per cent of the total represented a demand for new money rather than the refunding of existing debts.

Continuing the tendency of recent weeks, industrial bond offerings and new stock issues accounted for a large part of the total.

Selling Wave, Profit Taking Lower Grains

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 19.—The grain price rise since April 8 accompanying the Scandinavian phase of Europe's war, having added about 9 cents to wheat and corn values, 7 cents to rye and 3 cents to oats, prompted liberal selling by traders who had accumulated profits today.

The result was a general price setback in all pits except corn, where values advanced at one stage to new high levels since 1937. Wheat closed ⅞-1¼ cents lower than yesterday, May $1.10⅞, July $1.09¾-½; corn ⅜ higher to 1-4 lower, May 64½-⅝, July 65½; Oats ⅜-½ off; Rye ⅞-1¼ down; Soy beans ¾-1½ off and lard 17-22 lower.

Wheat tumbled as much as 1⅝ cent, at one stage. Spot prices were ¾-1 cent lower but some No. 2 Red sold as high as $1.15½, the highest price paid for actual wheat here since 1937. No cash sales were reported yesterday.

The futures market also had to absorb additional hedging sales.

Larger Supply. Better Demand Seen in Livestock

The Agriculture Department said yesterday that slaughter supplies of livestock during the summer and fall months were expected to be larger than a year ago. Stronger consumer demand, it said, however, may tend to offset price-depressing effects of increased marketings.

Because of last year's huge pig crop and the unfavorable relation between corn and hog prices from the feeding standpoint, many farmers were said to be moving hogs to market at lighter weights and to be disposing of some of their breeding stock.

Marketings during the first half of the current season were reported to have been 23 per cent larger than for the same period last season. Reflecting the supply situation, hog prices declined in early April to the lowest level since the summer of 1934.

Cotton Slides 2 to 8 Points On Selling Trend

New York, April 19 (AP).—The cotton futures market's recent disappointing response to bad-crop news was the tipoff to sell today. Final prices were 2 to 8 points lower.

Holders of long contracts seemed a bit gloomy that recent freezing weather in parts of the belt, and consequent damage to the newly planted crop had failed to stir up more buying.

Announcement from London that freight allocation for American cotton imports in May had been halved to 50,000 tons caused considerable transferring of hedges in the Liverpool market, but was rated a minor factor in local trade.

Cottonseed oil futures plunged 12 to 14 points today in the fastest trade of the year. Sales mounted to 261 contracts, which compared with the previous peak of 263 on December 15 last year. Prices closely paralelled the action of lard, although setbacks in wheat and other outside markets contributed to pressure. May closed at 6.93; July, 7.02; September, 7.09 bid; October, 7.11; December, 7.13 bid. Crude oil was priced nominally at 6 cents a poud in the Southeast and Valley and 5¾@5¾ in Texas.

Ohio Standard Oil To Redeem Debentures

New York, April 19 (AP).—Standard Oil Co. of Ohio has completed arrangements for redemption on June 1 of the $4,500,000 outstanding of its 10-year 3½ per cent sinking fund debentures, it was learned today. Debentures totaling $500,000 will be retired on June 1 through the sinking fund while the balance will be paid on the same date with proceeds of any eight-year bank loan.

RFC Loan to Postal

The Postal Telegraph Co. has received a $5,000,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Jesse Jones, Federal loan administrator, said yesterday. He described it as a "work loan" because much of it would be used in creating and maintaining jobs for the company's employes.

FSC Buys Pork

The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation announced yesterday that it had awarded contracts to 16 packers for the purchase of 1,862,500 pounds of smoked pork products.

The meat will be sent to State and local relief agencies for distribution among needy families.

Toledo Edison Offer

New York, April 19 (AP).—Securities of Toledo Edison Co. were offered the public today by a group headed by First Boston Corporation. The offering was $3,000,000 of first mortgage 3¼ per cent bonds at 104½ per cent of par, and $7,250,000 of 3½ per cent sinking fund debentures at 102.

U. S. Investment In Scandinavia $221,000,000

New York, April 19.—The German tide in Scandinavia imperils $41,000,000 invested by Americans in Norwegian and Danish business enterprises, $26,000,000 invested in Swedish industry, according to an article in Business Week today. Including Scandinavian government bond issues held by Americans, the United States has a total economic interest of $221,000,000 in the three northern kingdoms.

The magazine points out that assembly plants of Ford and General Motors are within range of guns on German warships in Copenhagen harbor. Close to Stavanger, where British and German planes fight over Norway, is the Electric Furnace Products Co., Ltd., a subsidiary of Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation. The Hoyang Works, the A/S Hangvik Smelter, and the A/S Kensarvik, the biggest Norwegian producers of aluminum, are American-controlled.

Department Store Sales Gain 5 Pct.

Department store sales on a country-wide basis were up 5 per cent for the week ended April 13, compared with the same week a year ago, but down 3 per cent for the four-week period ended April 13, according to the figures made public yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board.

Foreign Markets

London, April 19 (AP).—Forward tendencies in kaffirs and British government bonds helped steady a lackadaisical securities market today. Netherlands issues weakened abruptly following news a state of siege had been proclaimed in Holland. Industrial leaders held their ground fairly well. Department store securities and Lever Bros. issues were on offer most of the session. European and Far Eastern bonds were under pressure. Commodity stocks, including oils and coppers, were shaky.

Paris.—The bourse rallied modestly today as traders took a more optimistic view of Italian and Balkan relations to the war. Rentes countered the trend, however, notably the dollar-guaranteed issue under selling ascribed to big corporation holders. The closing range was 30 centimes higher to 60 lower.

Amsterdam.—Despite irregular price movements, the bourse appeared in a cheerier frame of mind today because of government action placing the country under martial law.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures closed 6 points higher to 5 lower with near months relatively steady. Hedges were transferred to forward deliveries following announcements May freight allocation for American cotton had been cut 50 per cent.

A new quiz program, "Take It or Leave It," with Bob Hawk as master-of-ceremonies, begins on WJSV and the Columbia network tomorrow at 10 p. m. David Ross is announcer and Ray Bloch supplies the music. The show is sponsored by Eversharp, Inc., for Eversharp pencils and pens.

DAVID ROSS

Creating an unusual air of suspense, it arouses as much excitement among listeners as in contestants. Here's the way it works:

Several persons are selected from the studio audience by Bob Hawk. One at a time, they come to the microphone. Hawks asks a question. If the contestant answers correctly, he gets $1—if he wants it. He has an alternative of taking a chance on a second question, which nets him $2 for the right answer. He may elect to risk the third question, for which the reward again is doubled.

This continues until the contestant has a chance to win $64 by answering correctly seven consecutive questions. He may quit any time and collect but if he misses—he gets nothing. Lost prizes go into a jackpot for which all contestants compete toward the program's end.

Bishop Tucker to Install Christ Church Rector

The Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States and bishop of Virginia, tomorrow at 11 a. m. will install the Rev. Edward Randolph Welles as twenty-fourth rector of historic Christ Episcopal Church, Alexandria, where President Washington worshiped.

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

SMOKY O'TOOLE—pride of the neighborhood, daughter of CLANCY O'TOOLE—retired fireman, widower.
MRS. HETRICK — neighbor, mother of KARL HETRICK—old love of Smoky's who married instead
DAGNE OLSEN—another neighborhood belle TEX STACY—young cowboy actor whom Smoky meets in a theatrical booking office.

The opening night of her show found Smoky so excited she hardly knew what was happening. Clancy, her father, was unable to attend because of his physical condition. All was chaos and excitement in the dressing rooms, as is usual on an opening night. Smoky received a lot of advice from one of the other girls in the chorus, and was surprised when she received a lone orchid, with no name of the donor attached. The first night was a success, but Smoky was robbed of her joy when she saw the ingenue with her arms around Tex, calling him endearing names and praising his success.

SMOKY'S HANDS trembled while taking her make-up off and getting into her new, sleek taffeta gown, the gown the girls in the store said showed every line of her figure to advantage and left almost nothing to the imagination.

Torchy smeared cold cream on her own round little face babbling: "I heard Jim Chance, the press agent, say when I was comin' off the stage that the Ginger Snaps and Tex Stacy were the hit of the show. A star is born, I guess. Maybe you aren't so crazy after all, Toots."

Smoky said, grimly: "I know what I'm doin', Torchy, and don't let anything surprise you."

"I'm way past that stage after three years in this racket," Torchy shrugged. Then added, excitedly: "Jim Chance says we'll all be havin' to get a lot of pictures taken. That we're going to be as famous as the Floradora sextet."

"Oh, I hope so," Smoky sighed fervently. "And I'm so happy about Tex. I knew he would be a riot. He's got everything. Voice, looks—and he can act like nobody's business."

"To say nothing of the whee he's loting around." Torchy shook her head. "You're certainly sunk, Smoke. I hope your cowhand doesn't turn out to be a false alarm."

"I'll take a chance," Shamrock smiled.

But she was far from confident inside. Tex had laughed when Smoky warned him that she might ask him to marry her. But there was no way of knowing how he would react when he found out she was serious.

Why shouldn't a girl ask a man to marry her if she felt like it? Women were equal! They voted, held men's jobs, worked after they were married to help support the home. Was there any reason why a girl should be afraid to let a man know she wanted him?

With Smoky it was a matter of life and death. She was desperately determined to get married right away, and Tex was the man fate seemed to have placed in her way.

It seemed a long time since the day Mrs. Hetrick had put the idea of proposing to Karl into her head. It had seemed a good joke then. For, of course, she and Karl had been planning their own home for so long, setting a wedding date was only a small matter of form.

Smoky thought over all these things while sitting on a bench outside Tex's dressing room waiting for photographers and reporters to get through with him. Jim Chance was making sure Melvin's new singer met all the gentlemen of the press available.

Smoky Lays the Trap

Finally Tex came out. He whistled when he saw the lovely orchid on the shoulder of her silver fox jacket: "Whew! Some guy with a lot of money must have been sitting down front."

"I've no more idea than you who sent it," Smoky told him, truthfully.

"You'll find out," Tex predicted, helping her through the crowd that still buzzed around the stage door "Nobody's goin' to hide that light under a bushel."

"I wouldn't be interested." Shamrock took his arm outside the stage door. "Unless you sent it."

Tex looked down at her from his great height, smiling quizzically: "Are you sure about that, Smoky?"

"You're not blind," she said, in a low voice. "Let's go somewhere that's nice and quiet, Tex. Just the two of us—where we can be alone."

"I guess you're tired after all the excitement." Tex stopped. "I thought we'd go some place and dance. But if you'd rather not."

Using Her Wiles

"Not tonight." Smoky dropped her eyes before his questioning gaze. "I just want to be alone—with you."

"Aren't you hungry?" Tex inquired, puzzled.

"No." Smoky shook her head. "Could we take a cab?"

"Sure." He raised his hand for a taxi. "I'll get you home so you can get a good sleep."

"I—I don't want to go home just yet," Smoky stammered inside the machine. "I—I want to talk."

"Drive through Central Park," Tex instructed the driver.

There was a short self-conscious silence and then Shamrock moved close to Tex and found his hand. When she put her head on his shoulder the cowboy asked surprised, "What's the matter, Smoky?"

She turned her face and looked up at him, hoping desperately that he would kiss her and make it easier for her to tell him what she wanted to say.

But Tex made no attempt to accept the invitation of her lovely little mouth so close to his. Instead, his deep gray eyes grew darker and he said a little huskily: "What it is, Smoky? Tell me."

She closed her eyes, touching his hard lean cheek with her free hand. "Why don't you kiss me, Tex?" she whispered, and suddenly the man's arms were holding her and his lips were on hers hungrily.

Secretly triumphant, Smoky clung to him an let him kiss her several times before she pulled away to say in a scared little voice: "Oh, Tex! Don't, please, you frighteen me."

He drew her to him again and buried his lips deep in the cleft of her throat.

"I'm so crazy about you, Tex," Smoky whispered, feeling the hammering of his heart against her breast. "I thought you were never going to kiss me. I love you so."

Leap Year Proposal

It was a terrible lie and superstitiously Smoky crossed the fingers of her right hand as she had done ever since a small child when she told something that wasn't true. Tex was sweet and kind and she liked him. But she felt Karl was the only man she would ever love.

Tex's answer was to hold her closer and kiss her with a passion she had never seen before in her life. Karl had never been one to show his feelings too violently. Smoky was pleased with her newfound power.

It was a wonderful thing to have a man go crazy over you and be able to hold your own emotions in reserve. That was how smart women used men, bound them to them with strings of steel so that they would never go away.

Finally, Shamrock took Tex's hands away from her gently and brushed back the damp hair on his warm head to laugh softly: "You do like me a little, don't you, Tex?"

He said harshly: "You drive me crazy."

"Then," she leaned toward him, breathing rapidly, "why don't you marry me?"

CAA Examiner Passes Export Lines Plans For Rome Flights

American Export Airlines won a preliminary decision in a bitter battle over transatlantic air business yesterday.

C. Edward Leasure, Civil Aeronautics Authority examiner, recommended a license be issued to American Export to launch a New York to Rome transatlantic service. Final decision will be made by the C. A. A.

Pan American Airways, which conducts twice-weekly passenger and airmail service between the United States and Lisbon, Portugal, bitterly opposed the American Export petition, at least for the present. Leasure, however, held that "the sound development of an air transport system would be accelerated by competition from an American carrier."

"Competition," his report said, "does not necessarily mean duplication of service unless the field covered by a monopoly is completely served.

"There is no denying that the intervener (Pan American Airways) pioneered the route in question here, and that it is rendering efficient service within the limits of its facilities. However, it is obvious that at present its facilities are inadequate for the business available. Undoubtedly the saturation point in available traffic is not yet reached and, if its own testimony can be relied upon, such a point is many years away.

"In addition to the commercial advantages to be gained by American supremacy over this route, the C. A. A. must, under the act, consider the advantages that will accrue to the national defense by the development of our oceanic air transportation systems."

American Export plans to launch its service with a consolidated flying boat, making at first one round-trip a week. Pan American officials already have announced, with delivery of new huge flying ships under construction, they hope to start daily transatlantic service by next year.

Folk Festival Throng to Hear Tamburitza

Slavic Descendants To Play World's Oldest Stringed Instruments

The oldest stringed instrument in use by a Christian nation will be heard at the National Folk Festival next week. The Croatian tamburitza was devised by Carpathian Mountain shepherds more than 15 centuries ago. Festival audiences will hear it played by a tamburitza orchestra from Duquesne University, Pittsburgh.

The young people, all of Slavic ancestry, will wear the richly colored and embroidered costumes of their native lands. Their program will include both Yugoslavian and Russian folk music.

The tamburitza, one of the many folk instruments to be heard during the three-day festival opening Thursday at Constitution Hall, originated as a piece of wood and two strings. In succeeding years it has been so improved that it now ranks with the finest concert instruments.

Another group of European descent which will appear on the National Folk Festival program are Ukrainian dancers from Washington and Baltimore. Six young men, sponsored by the Ukrainian-American Club of Washington, will present a Ukrainian sword dance.

Harry Kany, their leader, says the sword dance is more widely known as the Russian Cossack dance. He considers this latter title a misnomer since the step originated centuries ago in the Ukraine, before Russia took over the country. The Russians, he said, appropriated the dance and renamed it.

Tickets for the National Folk Festival next Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Constitution Hall, may be obtained at The Washington Post.

Slayer Denied Visits by Child

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, of the District Court, yesterday refused to order that a 7-year-old girl be taken once a month to visit her father, who is serving life imprisonment for murder.

The father told the court in his plea for the order that he has not seen his child since August, 1938. Justice O'Donoghue ruled that Lorton Reformatory is not a suitable place to take the girl and that such an order would establish an undesirable precedent.
